Roosevelt administration "cracks down" on business—Attorney-General Cummings, Commerce Secretary Roper and Assistant Attorney-General Jackson firing three-front barrage. (See Page 4.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29 (AP) — Three developments gave fresh support today to the belief expressed by many officials that the Roosevelt administration would make an active campaign against its business critics:

1—Reports reached Congressmen from high administration sources that the President at a recent Cabinet meeting endorsed the principle of the Borah-O'Mahoney bill to license interstate corporations.

2—Senator Norris (Ind.-Neb.), a Roosevelt backer, suggested the Senate renew its investigation of lobbying in an effort to offset what he termed "organized propaganda" against the President's legislative proposals.

3—Secretary Ickes announced he would deliver a radio speech tomorrow night on "It Is Happening Here." Associates predicted he would discuss relations between government and business.

The reports concerning Roosevelt's views on the corporation licensing bill encouraged its friends to believe it might become the chief

Paris Strike Of 120,000 Perils City

All Public Utilities Paralyzed, Water Supply Failing

PARIS, Dec. 29—A strike of 120,000 public service workers spread a slow paralysis over Paris tonight, with transportation service disrupted, gas pressure noticeably decreasing and electric lights visibly growing weaker.

Police said further cessation of work at water plants would leave the city with only 24 hours' reserve supply.

The strikers in public utility departments went out early today, halting subway, bus and trolley service.

Premier Chautemps opposed the strike, and following the assertion that force would be used if necessary to restore public services, police evicted strikers from six electric plants and two gas works.

Further difficulties arose when the strike spread into the provinces. All food handlers in the town

City Ruined By Chinese In Retreat

BULLETIN

SHANGHAI, Dec. 29 — Chinese, apparently preparing to abandon the threatened Shantung port of Tsingtao, tonight began a campaign of destruction, blowing up all telegraph, cable and radio terminals. The explosions, which shook the entire city, cut off all communications and resulted in the greatest tension among the populace, including 159 Americans who had not yet evacuated.

SHANGHAI, Dec. 29 (INS)—Still more Americans fled war-threatened Tsingtao, northern Chinese port, for the safety of Shanghai today as advancing Japanese troops pressed closer to the rich city that forms Shantung province's gateway to the sea.

Twenty-six Americans left Tsingtao this morning aboard a merchant steamer, following 45 others who departed yesterday aboard the United States gunboat Sacramento.

With these departures, 172 Americans and hundreds of other foreigners were left in the menaced port. Japanese advance guards were reported only 60 miles away.

ADVISED TO EVACUATE

At the same time, American and other foreign nationals were advised by consular officials to evacuate immediately the towns of Kiukiang and Kuling, in the path of the Japanese.

In addition to 159 Americans still remaining in Tsingtao proper, thirteen others are still in the Tsingtao consular district.

Bomb Geyser Rises, Shroud for Panay

This bomb dropped from a Japanese plane was off its mark, but not by a great deal, and later a series of other bombs scored direct hits, reducing the U. S. S. Panay, American gunboat, to a mass of twisted metal and sending it to the bottom of the Yangtze river. The picture was taken from the deck of the Panay by Eric Mayell before the ship's personnel was forced to flee for their lives. The geyser thrown up by the bomb is nearer to the Standard Oil tanker close by than to the Panay. After the Panay was sunk this oil tanker and two others met the same fate.

Mrs. Hamilton Wins Decree

TOPEKA, Kan., Dec. 29 (AP)—Mrs. Laura Hall Hamilton was granted a divorce in district court here today from John D. M. Hamilton, Republican national chairman.

The decree was ordered by Judge Otis Hungate after an unexpected trial lasting about an hour. Ralph T. ONeil, Hamilton's law partner, appeared for the defendant, but did not contest the suit.

In addition to the divorce, Mrs. Hamilton was awarded custody of their two children, Daniel, 20, and Laura, 12.

In her petition, Mrs. Hamilton charged her husband with gross neglect of duty, abandonment for more than a year and extreme cruelty.

The couple was married on January 28, 1915.

Three Boston men today were called the "brains" of the nation-wide $100,000,000-a-year U. S. Treasury balance — sweepstakes — fake lottery racket.

They are Harry Sherman, ex-convict, of Hazelton street, Mattapan; Max Marcus, Blue Hill avenue, Dorchester, and Manuel Schwartz, Floyd street, also in Dorchester.

Sherman, Marcus and Schwartz were arrested by G-men, post-office inspectors and United States marshals in a series of raids that resulted in five other arrests here and in other Massachusetts cities.

Sixty-one others, U. S. Attorney George F. Garrity informed U. S. Commissioner Harry N. Gutterman, are either already under arrest or being sought in other parts of the country.

PLOT IS CHARGED

The arrests revealed a secret indictment, voted by a federal grand jury in Syracuse, N. Y., but not scheduled to be returned until next Tuesday.

Garrity told Commissioner Guterman, in open hearing, that this indictment will be returned. It charges, he said, conspiracy in the making of interstate shipments of lottery tickets.

Garrity asked Commissioner Gut-

Mrs. Schwartz told police she discovered the loss when she opened her jewel box to show the necklace to Mr. and Mrs. Isidore Buxbaum, Mandalay road, Newton Center, with whom she has been visiting.

She last wore the necklace to a dinner party in a New York hotel more than a week ago, she stated. Since then, she has been to Montreal, then back to New York before coming here. At what point of her journeys the necklace vanished, she said, she has no means of knowing.

Congress to Back Naval Expansion

President's Hint He May Ask More Ships Due For Approval, Experts Predict

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29 (INS)—Congressional backing for a naval rearmament program was foreseen by leaders in naval affairs today following President Roosevelt's disclosure that he may submit a supplemental warship-building program to Congress.

Strong advocates of adequate preparedness planned to go even further and ask the President to sanction expansion of both the army and navy air forces.

While Roosevelt, in a letter to Chairman Taylor (D.) of Colorado, of the House appropriations committee, merely said that he is contemplating a supplemental budget request for aditional ships, congressional leaders fully expect the request to be made.

The President, it appeared, may lay his proposals before both Congress and the nation when he personally delivers his annual message on January 3.

18 NEW CRAFT PLANNED

In his letter, Roosevelt disclosed officially that the preliminary budget estimates, already submitted confidentially to the House committee, contain requests for funds to begin construction of two new battleships, two light cruisers, eight destroyers and six submarines.

The budget estimate, it was learned, now stands approximately $50,000,000 above the amount appropriated for the navy last year.

Taylor, vigorous despite his 79 years, prepared personally to lead the fight for a new naval program if necessary.

Brushing aside budget-balancing demands, Taylor also declared for expansion of army and navy air forces, for both offensive and defensive purposes.

NYE OPPOSED

"Of course, Congress will back the President," asserted Taylor. "We want peace, but we have got to let the rest of the world know we can lick hell out of 'em."

Admitting that the program may upset burget-balancing plans Taylor declared that "an adequate defense right now is more important than balancing the budget."

Senator Nye (R.) of North Dakota, however, may lead a drive to check naval expansion. Before Roosevelt's letter was made public, he declared opposition to any increase in armament costs.

Senator McCarran (D.) of Nevada, declared "not for a navy second to none, but one a little bit better than the rest."

The President, in his letter to Taylor, referred to the early budget estimates and added:

"Since that time, world events have caused me growing concern. Under the Constitution, the President is commander-in-chief of the army and navy, and has, therefore, a very specific duty to safeguard the defense of national interests.

"In speaking of my growing concern, I do not refer to any specific nation or to any specific threat against the United States. The fact is that in the world as a whole, many nations are not only continuing but are enlarging their armament programs.

MAY ASK MORE SHIPS

"Will you, therefore, be good enough to inform the subcommittee on naval appropriations that after the next session of the Congress has met, it is possible that I may send supplementary estimates for commencing construction on a number of ships additional to the above program."

The subcommittee, which is headed by Representative Umstead (D.) of North Carolina, will convene on January 3.

Hearings have been almost completed on the naval supply bill. If the President asks for additional ships, members said, hearings could be quickly ended and the bill whipped into shape for early action.

120,000 Workers Strike in Paris

of Grande-Combe, near Avignon, struck. They claimed employers had not adhered to collective bargaining contracts.

This afternoon police took charge of the 10 reservoirs around Paris.

Union delegates renewed objections of truck drivers to the use of army trucks for carrying newspapers. Delegates told Chautemps they would "disclaim all responsibility for consequences which may result."

Shipowners at Rouen went into court, demanding that striking crews of 30 ships be fined and imprisoned for failing to accept arbitration.

CALLS CABINET

Chautemps, ordering an emergency session of the cabinet to deal with the crisis, warned that the government would combat it "with the greatest vigor." The premier asserted the strike had been "deliberately provoked."

Chautemps refused to see a delegation of strikers who sought to talk with him at his office after he had conferred with Vice-Premier Leon Blum, Defense Minister Edouard Daladier and Minister of Interior Marx Dormoy.

In that hasty ministerial parley, officials said, "members of the government drafted measures necessary to assure the maintenance of order and the functioning of public services."

WATER SUPPLY MENACED

The city's water supply was menaced when hundreds of workers assigned to reservoirs and aqueducts quit in sympathy with subway, bus and street car strikers.

Recruits joined the strike rapidly from many fields. Included were cemetery workers, who voted to carry out only "urgent" funerals.

Playground guardians deserted their posts, compelling authorities to close public play fields at a time when they are usually crowded with children—the Christmas holidays.

Drivers for provincial bus lines also participated, spreading the paralysis to outlying areas. Dock workers quit, threatening difficulties for transatlantic steamships, their freight and passengers.

ARMY HANDLES FOOD

Street cleaners and garbagemen and some municipal office employes also quit.

Distribution of water, gas and electricity remained normal this afternoon, thanks to reserve supplies and substitute workers, but officials said the population might be asked to reduce consumption tonight if the strike persisted.

Unemptied garbage pails lined the capital's unswept streets.

Thousands of other workers were still idle in strikes at the Paris Goodrich rubber factory and at grocery warehouses.

Morning service at the American Hospital in suburban Neuilly was delayed by the tardy arrival of the staff members, most of whom had been forced to hike or cycle.

Plot to Overthrow Chautemps Bared

PARIS, Dec. 29 (INS)—Excitement over the sudden general strike in Paris was increased today as the public learned of an amazing story of an alleged Communist plot to overthrow the Chautemps government by wholesale assassinations and arrests.

This tale was recited in a magistrate's court by a wealthy French Fascist consulting engineer, Eugene Deloncle, himself accused as ringleader of the recently exposed Rightist conspiracy "threatening the safety of the state."

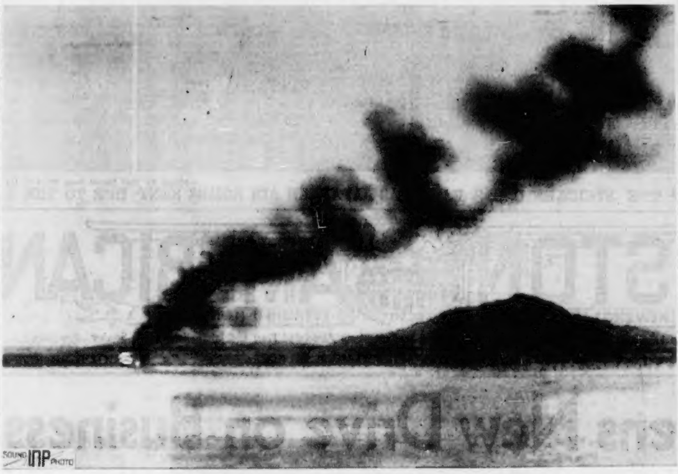
Oil Smoke Pall for River Tragedy



Its cargo of oil sending a dense spiral of smoke skyward, the flaming wreck of a Standard Oil tanker soon joined the Panay at the bottom of the river after a rain of bombs from Japanese planes. The crew of this ship leaped overboard as the missiles struck, and made their way to safety.

Britain Spurns Japan Version

TOKYO, Dec. 29 (INS)—A new diplomatic controversy arose suddenly today as Britain voiced objections to Japan's explanation of how her forces in China attacked the British gunboat Ladybird on the Yangtze river.

Japan's formal reply to the British protest was handed yesterday to British Ambassador Sir Robert Craigie for transmission to London. The reply will be made public abroad following its receipt in the British capital.

But today J. L. Dodds, counsellor of the British embassy, called at the Japanese foreign office and intimated the embassy was unable to accept the Japanese army's version of the Ladybird attack.

Dodds pointed out that the embassy report of the incident conflicted with the army version, claiming the assault, like that on the American gunboat Panay, was a "mistake."

Speculation was intensified when the Japanese government enforced a complete ban on publication in Japan of the reply to Britain.

This was a marked contrast to the Japanese action regarding Tokyo's reply to Washington on the Panay attack. The government permitted publication here of an abridged version of the note.

Tax Bill Upheld

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29—Income tax deficiency assessments of $7260 against Ellen Hyde Scoville, of Waterbury, Conn., for 1931, have been upheld by the board of tax appeals.

was arrested here for yesterday's hand-grenade attack on a Japanese boat in Soochow Creek, in which one Japanese soldier was injured. This incident duplicated a similar attack the day before.

Japanese authorities alleged the arrested Chinese confessed he was a member of the famous "Dare-to-Die" corps, and that he and 23 other Chinese soldiers had entered Shanghai in disguise for the purpose of harassing and destroying Japanese military and civilian life and property.

OTHERS IN GROUP HUNTED

As a result of his alleged confession, Japanese police were attempting to round up other members of the group.

In addition, Japanese authorities informed the Shanghai municipal council that they are now ready to take over the task of policing roads outside the International Settlement. They are expected to begin actual operations January 1.

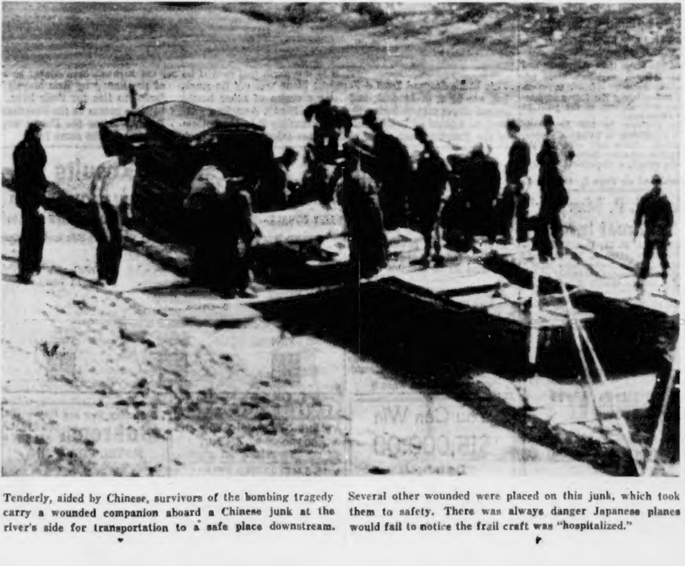
The Japanese also approached British military authorities regarding withdrawal of British outposts from areas outside the Settlement. The British are considering the matter.

A possible new source of trouble appeared as the American gunboat Oahu steamed up the Yangtze toward Hoshien, scene of the Panay attack, to attempt to salvage the Panay—in the face of Japanese warnings that such a trip was unsafe.

En route to Hoshien, the Oahu will attempt to land American embassy officials at Nanking to open the American embassy in the former Chinese capital, now held by the Japanese.

Save 400 Doomed Spain Prisoners

LONDON, Dec. 29 (AP)—An exchange agreement by which the lives of 400 condemned Spanish war prisoners would be saved was reported reached today between the Spanish insurgents and the government.



Tenderly, aided by Chinese, survivors of the bombing tragedy carry a wounded companion aboard a Chinese junk at the river's side for transportation to a safe place downstream.

Several other wounded were placed on this junk, which took them to safety. There was always danger Japanese planes would fail to notice the frail craft was "hospitalized."

Gen. Johnson Says:

Cat Fight Is Best Prophecy for 1938

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 29—From now on until after the first of the year, the public prints will be full of forecasts for 1938.

There was a time when that could be done if it didn't attempt to talk about more than six months in the future and if it cushioned itself on a lot of carefully prepared alibis to take care of the difficult problem of timing which nobody has ever solved in calling economic trends.

HUGH S. JOHNSON

But those days seem gone forever. When business futures were pretty well controlled by the state of inventories, prices, credit and the money market, experts with these influences could come close to an appraisal. It was something like playing poker but the rules and principles were pretty well known and it wasn't too hard to guess.

The difference now is that, while it is still a poker game, the rules are subject to change by the house without notice. After the deal, the draw and the bets, you may have sprung on you a "pazaza" which changes all the rules and makes a pair of deuces outrank a royal flush.

The trouble now is that government has taken control of most of the important influences over business, and given them to one man and you can never be sure of what he is going to do from one day to the next—or even between morning and evening.

Take the question of money. He controls its value and, since money is just a composite measure of the price of everything, he can control or largely influence price as well.

* * *

He controls the tariff within certain very flexible limits. To the extent that it affects prices and activity, he can turn it on or off like a light.

He controls the volume of bank credit by his influence on Federal Reserve policy—and that is just another way of saying he controls the amount of counters or chips which the boys can use in their poker game.

He controls the rate at which the government pumps or doesn't pump billions out to the people with which to buy things.

* * *

To a very large extent he has been given the power to make economic war—for example, to cut off a large percentage of our cotton exports tomorrow, if he so desires. The economic structure is largely a keyboard on which he probably could produce almost any effect—if he knew the music.

Most important of all, he controls—or did until recently—what Congress is going to do. With him rests the word whether we are to have a new attack on the capitalist or profit system and drive money—which is the life blood of business activity and recovery—into any hiding place it can find.

How is anybody going to make a 1938 business prophecy that is worth the paper on which to write it?

* * *

It is a question of guessing the mind of the king, and it is exactly that which "no man knoweth." There is now in his councils and confidence nobody who understands clearly the needs and intricacies of business. Joe Kennedy? Yes, but he has been put on a spot where he has hardly a choice but to go as ambassador to England.

Joe got his head too far above the ruck and there was no hope for him after that but to be either liquidated or translated. He was lucky that it was no worse than England. With him gone, the important New Deal councillors don't believe in recovery through better business. They believe in harassing and castigating business with restrictive laws and breaking up business with confiscatory taxation. My only prophecy for 1938 is that we are in for a Kilkenny cat-fight.

Last of Codonas Works in Garage

LONG BEACH, Cal., Dec. 29 (AP)—The last of the Flying Codonas—daredevils of the circus trapeze for 50 years—went to work in a garage today.

A shoulder injury had ended the big top career of Lalo Codona. In overalls, he smilingly disclosed he already has his daughter, Lita, practicing on tumbling bars.

PANAY BOMB HORROR SHOWN AS MOVIES REACH U. S.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 29 (INS)—The American public will get its chance today to see a picturization of real-life horror and chaos in the newsreel of the bombing of the U. S. Gunboat Panay in the Yangtze river by Japanese war planes.

The picture will be released to theaters here today and will be rushed all over the country.

The films were made by Eric Mayell for News of the Day newsreel and Fox Movietone.

A private showing of the films following their arrival from the Orient evoked awe and repulsion from the 200 in the audience.

The entire grim story of the "incident" was unfolded before their eyes.

SAILORS MAN GUNS

Quickly, but cooly, sailors on the Panay scramble over the debris-laden deck and man machine-guns, and attempt to fire at the death-scattering bombers, which are apparently directly above the stricken ship.

Wounded survivors are depicted making their way as best they can out of the zone of fire. They are being aided by those not at the guns.

The wounded are given treatment by their comrades as the attack still rages, some even grinning in the face of death.

A sailor, his body horribly gashed, in being lowered to a Chinese sampan from the sinking vessel. Another badly wounded victim, his clothes half torn off, lies in the bottom of a rescue boat.

On the decks the Panay can be seen fragments of shrapnel.

Now she has sunk until her lower deck is under water, her bow still up. Now her forward guns are going under. Rolling more, the doomed craft lifts her stern and with a final plunge slides to the river's bottom.

Other closeups show the wounded brought ashore and in the reeds on the banks of the Yangtze river. Lieut. Commander J. J. Hughes is lying with his leg broken, but maintains a calm, stoical look as he waits for aid.

Nearby is Sandro Sandri, Italian war correspondent, wrapped in an overcoat, so badly hurt he is only semi-conscious. He was one of the men who died.

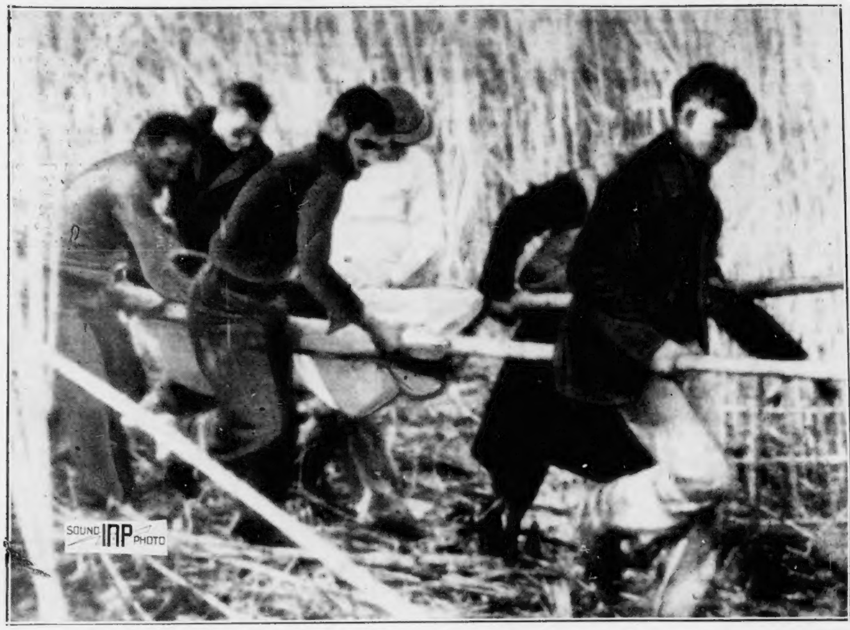
Graphic!

Rushed here in a manner in keeping with the epic nature of the achievement of heroic cameramen, exclusive pictures graphically recording the Japanese bombing of the United States Gunboat Panay appear in today's editions of the Boston Evening American.

From the Orient to San Francisco by China Clipper, and to Boston by Soundphoto, the pictures were sped to a public eager for this vivid, unprecedented record of the Panay tragedy—the crucial "incident" in which four men were killed.

Appearing here today in this edition are excerpts from the moving pictures made by News of the Day newsreel and Movietone News.

After Jap Planes Had Rained Death on Ill-Fated Panay



The Panay has gone down to the bottom of the Yangtze River, but there is still danger overhead. In fear of further Jap bombing, these survivors of the stricken American gunboat, who barely made their way to the river shore, hastily carry a wounded member of their party through the dense rushes on the stream's bank.

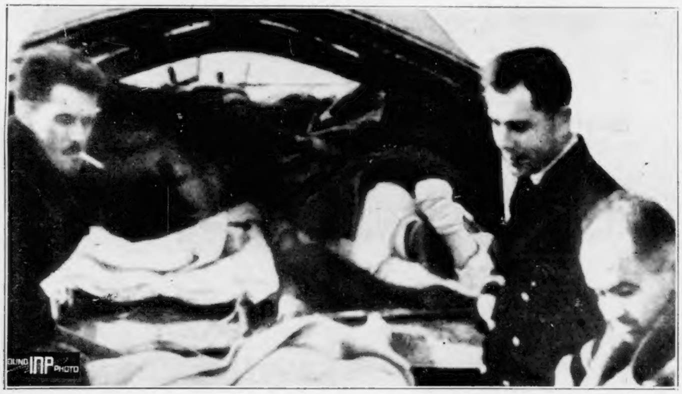
Jim Marshall, news correspondent, haggard and worn from shrapnel wounds received on the Panay, attempts to smile as his picture is snapped following his rescue.

All the photos on this page, the first and exclusive ones of the international incident, were taken by Eric Mayell, from News of the Day and Movietone News, supplied by International News Photos Soundphoto.



Protected by the flimsy roof of a small Chinese junk, these wounded Panay survivors are being carried down the Yangtze River to safety after their rescue from the stream's bank. Companions who fortunately escaped wounds stand by. Despite an effort to look cheerful, the survivors all show the strain of the ordeal through which they have passed.

Stripped to the waist, a sailor of the Panay is given first aid by other members of the vessel's crew for wounds received in the bombing. Though in the open on the river bank, and pospossible targets for Jap bullets, the United States sailors seem cool and efficient in the crisis.

Blood showing through his shirt-sleeve and a makeshift bandage covering his mouth, an officer of the Panay rests in the concealing reeds during the survivors' trek inland to safety. Even though suffering intense pain from his wounds the Navy man sits straight.

A last look at their sinking former "home." Two of the Panay's crew, one of whom has stripped himself of his trousers to facilitate his swim in the Yangtze River, gaze back from the motor launch which has picked them up at the slowly-sinking Panay. There is utter bewilderment in the attitude of the rear man and a sort of stolid anger in the pose of the sailor in front. The survivors landed on all parts of the river bank and great difficulty was experienced by the rescue crews in rounding them up. These photos were transmitted direct to the Boston American, via Soundphoto.

New Deal Orators 'Crack Down' on Business Again

The New Deal cracked down on alleged monopolistic business in an assault launched simultaneously on three fronts today:

ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL JACKSON in Philadelphia charged "big business" was out to "liquidate the New Deal," and warned that "public wrath is rising against the strike of capital."

ATTORNEY GENERAL CUMMINGS in Washington expressed hope that Congress will enact anti-trust legislation in the coming session.

SECRETARY OF COMMERCE ROPER in his year-end report declared that "evil monopoly" can expect only further federal regulation.

Jackson in Third Attack on 'Profiteers'

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 29 (INS)—Striking twice within three days against monopolies and profiteering as the real causes of the business recession, Robert M. Jackson, assistant U. S. attorney-general, today accused big business of being out to "liquidate the New Deal" and conducting a "strike of capital against political action which it fears and dislikes."

Addressing the American Political Science Association, the youthful New Dealer, who Sunday accused business of wanting to co-operate with the federal recovery movement only with the proviso it may continue its monopolies and profiteering, said:

"The only just excuse that can be made of the economic operation of the New Deal is that it set out a breakfast for the canary and let the cat steal it; it did not sufficiently guard recovery from the raids of the monopolist.

"One group in the United States that has no cause for complaint is the big business group."

'The only agency with the power to condition capitalism and industrialism to survive is the government," Jackson said.

SLOAN PAY ADVANCED

'Big business has let loose its bulldogs to bark at the public that my speeches attacking monopoly are 'destructive and deceitful,' and that the real cause of the high prices and the consequent recession is labor cost.

"I know too much about big business to attack labor for its struggle to get a decent wage, or to blame it for this recession. Labor has had nowhere near the percentage of advance that big business has given to its own darlings."

Here he mentioned the General Motors Corporation which yesterday announced the laying-off of 30,000 workers and the placing of its plants on a three-day week basis. Saying he "disliked to be personal," Jackson added:

" . . . It is a matter of public record that Mr. Sloan (Alfred P. Sloan, chairman of the board) of General Motors received in 1934 a compensation of $201,473.75. In 1935 it was advanced to $374,505. In 1936 it was advanced again to $561,311.

"Mr. Knudsen (William S. Knudsen, president of General Motors) received in 1934 $211,128. It was advanced in 1935 to $374,475, and it was advanced again in 1936 to $507,645. Of course, the executive, like the laborer, is worthy of his hire.

"What does big business mean when it asks for government cooperation? Does it mean the sort of cooperation that was given to it under the Hoover administration? We can think of no other."

RECORD RECALLED

Jackson then recited big business' own record under what he called the "co-operative" administration of Hoover, and under what he facetiously termed the "hostile" administration of Roosevelt.

He cited various companies in the following industries as making profits in 1936 against losses in 1932: Mail order, building material, chemical, farm implement, steel and automobile.

He gave figures showing:

Two automobile concerns (Chrysler and General Motors) had a combined loss of $11,000,000 in 1932, and a profit of $301,000,000 in 1936.

Four steel companies (United States, Crucible, National and Jones & Laughlin) were shown as losing $82,000,000 in 1932, and making $70,000,000 in 1936.

Three chemical companies (du Pont, American Cyanamid and Monsanto) reportedly made $27,000,000 in 1932, and $96,000,000 in 1936.

Jackson continued:

"Certain groups of big business have now seized upon a recession in our prosperity to liquidate the New Deal and to throw off all governmental interference with their incorporated initiative and their aristocratic anarchy."

TWO FACTS GIVEN

Mentioning an unnamed observer who said "there is something like a strike of capital against political action which it fears and dislikes," Jackson said he would dismiss such a picturesque figure of speech "except for two facts."

"First, nowhere in the press that speaks for big business have I seen this analysis repudiated. Second, I have seen in Washington plenty of evidence that big business has seized this explanation of the recession as a cudgel to whack concessions out of government.

"The wrath of the people has been rising as they have seen Uncle Sam told to stick up his hands and deliver over his utilities program, his monopoly program, his social security program and his tax program to one or another interested group."

Jackson accused the few men who control the nation's wealth of practicing a policy of "imperial freedom of design." He said:

"Many of the present leaders of big business are a hang-over. They are repeating, with the same dismal results, the threatening tactics they tried on Theodore Roosevelt during the 'rich man's panic' that they precipitated in rebellion against his reforms."

Jackson said Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the U. S. Maritime Commission, whom he described as one of the ablest industrial and political statesmen in the country, "put in good Kipling language" the whole philosophy of big business, when he told his associates in business a few nights ago "to stop their bellyaching."

Anti-Trust Legislation Is Proposed

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29 (INS)—Attorney-General Cummings expressed hope today that Congress will enact new anti-trust legislation at the next session.

Declaring he has no specific legislative proposals to suggest, the Attorney-General said the department is ready to make available data and information immediately which will assist in formulation of new monopoly statutes.

Cummings also denied stories that he is unalterably opposed to federal licensing of corporations.

"This is absolutely incorrect," he asserted. "The licensing plan is an old idea. While it does not give Congress powers it does not already have, licensing is a powerful administrative weapon. Whether it should be used and how far it should be used is something that should be carefully studied."

Cummings again urged that Congress should make a most painstaking investigation of the trust problem, observing that such a study probably would take "a long time."

"I am hopeful, however," he added, "that anti-trust legislation will be enacted at the forthcoming session."

U. S. Must Curb Evil Monopoly, Roper Warns

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29 (INS)—A new warning to business that abuses and "evil monopoly" will bring further extension of federal regulation was sounded here today in a year-end statement by Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper.

The secretary prefaced his observations with these words:

"Good business has nothing to fear from this administration. I want to repeat and emphasize that."

ALERT FOR "ABUSES"

He said the hand of government regulation is not laid upon mere size, but that it is alert to put down abuses.

"The true measure of business success," he said, "is the social and economic services rendered.

"When unfair, monopolistic practices are engaged in, and cannot be corrected through normal competitive procedure, then the government must protect the rights of the public through regulatory agencies, as has always been illustrated through the creation of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Federal Trade Commission. The regulatory activities of the government are not, therefore, directed at mere size of the individual business unit, but at abuses.

"It must, of course, be recognized that large corporate units carry an increased social responsibility in the use of their natural power. But the fundamental criterion by which industrial units should be judged is the extent to which the public interest is served, rather than form or size."

1937 WAS "BETTER"

Broadly the Roper report found 1937 a better year than the preceding one, although it recognized recession, due to labor disputes and other factors.

Although no specific predictions were made for coming year, Roper pointed to several "elements of strength" in the present economic setup.

Notable among these was listed a "sound" banking structure, embodying safety for bank deposits and low interest credit. An "enormous volume" of deferred durable goods requirement was listed also, and the prediction was made that if plans for the new housing program swing into operation, inevitably there will be expansion in 1938.

Taking cognizance of the recession, Roper mentioned both domestic fear and uncertainty over the international situation. He said:

"There is an element of fear retarding further recovery. To some extent these fears are psychological, but they naturally affect the planning of those so disturbed. As to the fear of war, it is difficult to wholly allay anxiety from this cause when most of Europe and the Far East are demoralized by war clouds and conflict."

Drops Dead in Depot

BATH, Me., Dec. 29 (AP)—A man identified by police as Wendell H. Donnell, 65, of Kingston, Mass., dropped dead in the Bath railroad station today.

What Economist Sprague Sees In Today's Business Picture

ATLANTIC CITY, Dec. 29—First, reduce wages.

That, in turn, would enable manufacturers to reduce prices.

Reduced prices would stimulate buying.

Increased buying would mean more work.

And eventually, as mass-production got under way again to satisfy the increased demand for products, wages could come back up while prices still stayed down.

That is the program advocated here by Professor O. M. W. Sprague, Harvard economist, president of the American Economic Association, and former advisor to the United States Treasury Department and the Bank of England.

DISCUSSES WAGES

Professor Sprague spoke at a joint meeting of the American Economic Association and the American Statistical Association, held in conjunction with the convention of the Allied Social Service Associations.

His suggestions referred particularly to the capital goods industries. He declared the policies pursued by labor, industry and government for the past five years all are "mistaken."

Wages, he pointed out, cannot be kept at high levels if sales of the products for which labor is being paid are not made. Key to the present situation, he declared, is the heavy goods industry.

"Further expansion in the consumer goods industries," he asserted, "can not take place on a solid foundation unless it is supported by increased employment in the heavy industries."

Competition in the heavy industries, on the other hand, he insisted, is neither desirable nor, from a practical point of view, possible.

PLANNING NEEDED

"The problem must be attacked in some other fashion, with the objective in view of securing by more orderly and less disastrous methods what might be accomplished under a regime of unfettered competition," he declared.

"Where the number of producers is limited, the range of choice in the determination of business policies is widened. Planning of some sort takes the place of the invisible hand of competition.

"The problem, therefore, is to discover the kind of planning which will best serve both the interests of the heavy industries as well as those of the community.

"What I have said about the heavy industries would seem to apply with very little modification to the policies of various groups of organized workers.

SCORES U. S. POLICY

"The demand for the labor of any one group of skilled workers is not greatly increased by anything that the group may do in the matter of wage rates.

"It is only a general reduction of wage rates of all the groups of skilled workers that work in association in producing a given product that can be expected to exert a stimulating influence on demand.

"As I look at the matter, both business policies and labor policies during the last four years have impeded the development of a demand for the products of the capital goods industries—policies which, until recently, in all events, have apparently been regarded with unconcern, if not with favor, by the government in Washington."

Corduroy Mills Close in Lowell

LOWELL, Dec. 29 (AP)—Officials of the Waterhead Mills, manufacturers of corduroy, today announced the plant, employing 300 hands, would be closed indefinitely. The mills have been shut down since December 24 for inventory.

The stock of cloth and "the fact that the cost of production has made it impossible for us to compete" were given as reasons for the closing.

416,230 New Auto Plates Are Issued

A total of 416,230 automobile registration plates had been issued to date by the state registry of motor vehicles according to an announcement of officials today. This was 57,594 more than were issued during the same period last year.

Federal Labor Control Scored by Woll of AFL

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 29 (AP)—Matthew Woll, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, declared today that labor was "unalterably opposed" to federal control of labor relations, and that it was "inevitable" that the Wagner Act would be amended to clarify the rights of both labor and the National Labor Relations Board.

Speaking before the American Political Science Association, Woll asserted the function of government was to serve in the role of umpire and to help make the rules of the game but never to become a player.

"Labor is entirely willing to have the government, through its Department of Labor, set up standards, exchange information and help the settlement of disputes," Woll said.

"But it is unalterably opposed to any department of the government attempting to control and direct the relations of industry from a Washington office.

"It is the conviction of an ever-increasing number of the leaders of the American trade union movement that the government has ventured too far into the extension of its function into the whole area of our industrial life.

"It has certainly gone a great way in its attempt to control and direct the activities and function of trade unions."

Chief Mate Leaps Into Sea, Drowns

BATON ROUGE, La., Dec. 29—Members of the Standard Oil tanker S. M. Spaulding's crew said Karl Christenson, 44, chief mate, apparently met his death by leaping into the Atlantic Ocean off the Florida coast.

TOLEDO, O., Dec. 29 (AP)—Three persons were drowned today when a plane plunged into Lake Erie half a mile off Put-In-Bay. The pilot was saved. The dead:

NANCY HOWARD, 43.
DELBERT WATKINS, 30.
ALBERT ANDERSON, 45.

The victims all were residents of North Bass Island.

The rescued:

WILLIAM SOMOGY, 30, pilot.

The plane fell into open water as the pilot, blinded by heavy fog, tried to land on the ice.

Somogy clung to the tail until saved by rescuers in a boat.

Detroit Line Helps Jan. 1 Joymakers

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 29 (AP)—From 1 to 5 a. m. on the first day of 1938, Fred A. Nolan said:

"There will be a lot of people who will not feel like walking any farther than necessary."

And there'll be motorists who won't want to drive home from a party.

So Nolan, general manager of Detroit's Street Railway and Motor Bus System, announced that, between the hours mentioned, all buses will go right to the door of any passenger who lives on a paved street not more than two blocks off the regular route.

The service will not include ringing doorbells.

Witnesses View Breen Killing Suspect

Revere Man Arrested Again as Police Stage Lineup

Re-arrest of a Revere suspect in connection with the gangland slaying of David J. "Beano" Breen was revealed today when the man was placed in the lineup at police headquarters before 10 witnesses.

Police Commissioner Joseph F. Timilty ordered the man picked up again when he learned that police of the Warren avenue station had failed to show the suspect to the witnesses.

One witness, an employe of the Metropolitan Hotel, South End, in the lobby of which Breen was slain nearly two weeks ago, pointed to the suspect and said:

"He's very similar in type to the man who did the shooting. But the other man was a little taller, heavier and broader. His clothes are about the same.

WOMEN SEE LINEUP

"But I never saw anyone in this lineup before. I'm positive of that."

Among the witnesses who failed to identify any of the men in the lineup were two women.

The police theory that there was a definite link between the slaying of Breen and that of Louis Gaeta, Revere "gambling king," was further advanced today following revelation of a report made to Commissioner Timilty by Sergeant Raymond Monahan of the homicide squad.

Sergeant Monahan's disclosures followed the discovery of a card in the clothing of Breen which contained the name and telephone number of Gaeta.

MONAHAN'S STORY

About six or seven weeks ago, according to Sergeant Monahan, he was returning from lunch to police headquarters when he passed Breen's so-called headquarters on Tremont street.

In an automobile parked outside, the officer told the commissioner, were Breen, the Revere suspect placed in today's lineup and a man he believes was James F. Preston, fugitive racketeer indicted for the murder of Gaeta. Preston and Breen were known to be close friends.

Sergeant Monahan said he identified Preston from photographs.

The Revere suspect, who was taken to the Warren avenue station for further questioning, was not asked in the lineup concerning Sergeant Monahan's story.

Hold Gaeta Slaying Witness in $50,000

A Beachmont man today was held in bail of $50,000 as a material witness to the gangland slaying of Louis Gaeta, Revere gambler.

He was Charles Caldare, who was arraigned before Judge Frederick W. Fosdick in Suffolk Superior court.

Caldare, whose life was said to have been threatened, was taken into court by Assistant Attorney General John S. Derham, in charge of the anti-crime drive in Revere, and Assistant Attorney General Garrett H. Byrne. With them was Patrolman John H. Gerraughty of Revere.

The arrest was the third in the month-old killing, for which James M. Preston, of Wilmington, has been indicted. Preston is the object of a wide-spread search.

Indication that the state is prepared to swing into action in the courts shortly was given when Derham, Byrne and Gerraughty went to the district attorney's office immediately after the arraignment.

They held a lengthy conference there with Indictment Clerk Gertrude M. Maloney. The subject of their conversation was not revealed.

2 Men Drop Dead Of Heart Attacks

Two men collapsed from heart attacks while walking in different sections of Greater Boston today and were pronounced dead on arrival at Haymarket Relief Hospital.

George A. Harris, 67, married, of Willow street, Belmont, collapsed in Purchase street at Congress street. He was a shipper in a Purchase street leather firm. James D. Reeves, 24, who lived with a widowed mother on Medford street, Charlestown, collapsed on Main street, Charlestown.

Window Is Used To Remove Casket

While mourners stood with bared heads piano movers lowered the casket containing the body of Mrs. Josephine DePasquale from a second-floor rear window of her home on Main street, Medford, today.

This was necessary, it was explained, because of an extremely narrow stairway with a sharp turn that made it impossible for the casket to be carried out in the usual way. Burial was in St. Michael's Cemetery, Forest Hills, after services in Mount Carmel Church, East Boston.

Sled Crash Injures Two Brighton Boys

Two Brighton boys were injured when their sled hit a mail truck, according to police, in the season's first coasting accident as icy streets provided ideal sledding.

They were Charles Pabalane of Glencoe street and Bartholomew Burns of Etna street, both 13, according to police.

Six streets were set aside for coasting to avoid further accidents. They are Mansfield, Newton, Hobart, Ridgefield, Dustin and Union streets, police announced.

EIGHT HELD IN LOTTERY DRIVE

erman to hold Sherman, Marcus and Schwartz in $25,000 bonds each. Former Assistant United States Attorney John J. Walsh, Jr., representing the three men and the other defendants, protested, and it was then that Garrity told Commissioner Guterman—

"These three are the 'brains' of this alleged conspiracy."

BAIL IS SET

Commissioner Guterman, however, after hearing argument, held the trio in bonds of only $5000 each.

The five others were held in bonds each of $2000. They are:

JOSEPH LeCROIX of Fall River.
JOHN T. CALLAHAN of Lowell.
GORDON CLEARY, 23, Cambridge street, Worcester.
EARL ANDERSON, 31, Lowell street, Worcester.
MAX FELDMAN alias CARL REYNOLDS, of Boston.

The U. S. Treasury balance pool, operated in practically every large city in the country, is estimated by government agents to have been netting the operators some $4,200,000 annually.

The enormous "take" by the ring does not include purely local lotteries, over which, because no state lines are crossed, the federal law-enforcement officers have no jurisdiction.

"OFFICE" TRANSFERRED

About two years ago Boston headquarters of the syndicate were shifted to Syracuse.

Sherman, G-men said, served six months of a one-year-and-a-day sentence in federal prison at Lewisburg, Pa., for participation in the $1,500,000 Montreal Post Graduate Hospital sweepstakes, which post-office authorities charged was a scheme to defraud.

Schwartz and Feldman (alias Reynolds) were arrested by G-men in a raid on a place on Elm street, Somerville. Eight other men were taken into custody in this raid on charges of setting up and promoting a lottery. These eight, however, are not included among those for whom the fugitive warrants were issued in Syracuse.

EIGHT ARE LISTED

The eight are:

MAURICE HECKER, 37, Nightingale street, Dorchester.
HYMAN ROSE, 36, Webster avenue, Chelsea.
JOSEPH O'BRIEN, 27, Nashua street, Somerville.
HARRY KAUFMAN, 39, Norfolk street, Dorchester.
LAWRENCE ROGERS, 44, Normandy street, Roxbury.
ABRAHAM WOLF, 48, University avenue, Brookline.
LOUIS ROCCO, 38, Thurston street, East Boston.
FRANK H. GEE, 33, Irving street, Somerville.

U. S. AGENTS CRITICIZED

All eight were arraigned in Somerville district court before Judge Malcolm E. Sturtevant today. They pleaded not guilty and were held to the grand jury in bonds of $1000 each.

Somerville police testified they were called in by the federal agents who took Schwartz and Feldman into custody. Federal men were not in court, and the police told Judge Sturtevant they understood the G-men had "gone to Buffalo."

Angered because there was no one on hand to testify to what actually was found when the G-men raided the place, Judge Sturtevant criticized the federal agents and remarked that he hoped "someone will be there" when the case reaches the grand jury.

"BIG SHOTS" ONLY

The 69 indictments returned by the Federal grand jury in Syracuse are said to cover only the alleged "big shots" of the lottery-sweepstakes racket.

Hundreds of lesser "fry," who may be turned up in the search for these principals, will be dealt with by local authorities.

William J. West, New England chief of G-men, and Chief Post-office Inspector John J. Breslin and Inspector Tennyson Jefferson, in charge of lottery and sweepstakes investigations, have command of Federal forces moving against the racketeers here.

PROBE ON 3 YEARS

Federal agents said the Syracuse indictments were result of an investigation extending back three years.

An office force alone of more than 500 men and women was maintained at headquarters of the alleged syndicate when those headquarters were here. It was here, too, that thousands upon thousands of books of lottery tickets were printed for distribution to all parts of the country.

Each of the 69 alleged "big shots" has, or had, a staff of at least 150 picked men, federal agents assert, and each of these 150 had innumerable others acting as agents and in other capacities.

"Legitimate" lotteries and sweepstakes alone, G-men found, paid the syndicate enormous profits. By "legitimate" here is meant those actually paying off the winners.

In addition to these, however, federal investigation has disclosed huge "illegitimate" rackets in lotteries, U. S. Treasury balance number pools and fake sweepstakes. Some of these, particularly "plain" lotteries, have victimized various charitable and fraternal organizations, even churches.

These are the lotteries in which the church or other organizations seeking to raise funds for worthy purposes is approached by a promoter who offers to run a lottery "for charity."

Sometimes the church or whatever organizaton it is receives a flat, "guaranteed" sum outright. Sometimes it is promised a percentage of the "take."

In any event, John Q. Public is "stung," because the promoter fails to make good. The lotteries simply don't "pay off," or, if they do, they don't "pay off" the amount of prize money originally promised.

Pardon Hearings Set for 2 Lifers

Two lifers in state prison will be given hearings January 6 by the advisory board of pardons, according to an announcement made today by Ralph W. Robart, chairman of the state parole board.

They are Guiseppe Anxardro of Boston, sentenced December 22, 1922, on a charge of murdering Michael Scarpone of Boston and Albert W. Bartlett of New York city, sentenced on December 8, 1922, for the slaying of Frank E. Small of Dorchester.

Watertown Woman Is Held for Jury

Mrs. Betty Kahn, Concord road, Watertown, was ordered held for the grand jury by Judge F. A. Crafts in Waltham District Court today, in bonds of $4500 on charges of larceny and of receiving stolen property.

Judge Crafts fined her $5 for drunkenness and $35 for operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. She appealed and her bonds in this connection were set at an additional $500.

Insanity Pleaded In 'Ghost Slaying'

STEVENS POINT, Wis., Dec. 29 (AP)—Henry J. Nead, 19, collapsed today after pleading innocent by reason of insanity to a first degree murder charge based on the "ghost slaying" of his six-weeks-old foster-son. Nead, who Sheriff Henry Becker said confessed he slapped the child to death Christmas Day at the behest of the ghost of his dead father, was ordered committed to the State Central Hospital for observation until March, when court convenes.

War on Business Critics Seen vehicle for the administration's proposed attack on the monopoly problem.

In his last "Fireside Chat" Roosevelt declared there was need for tightening the anti-trust laws, but he has not outlined publicly any proposed legislation.

He was reported by usually well-informed persons to have said the Borah-O'Mahoney bill did not "go far enough." It provides that an enlarged Federal Trade Commission would charter corporations engaged in interstate or foreign commerce. Licenses could be denied to firms violating the anti-trust laws.

Cabinet opinion on the bill was said to have been divided, one or two members expressing strong opposition.

Denunciation of monopolies Sunday by Assistant Attorney-General Robert H. Jackson has led to speculation that the President would touch on the subject in his message to Congress next Monday. Roosevelt said he probably would deliver the message in person.

WATCH ICKES

Observers took particular note of Secretary Ickes' forthcoming speech because it follows Jackson's address so closely. Several administration supporters, like Jackson, have been blaming monopolities for the business recession.

Senator Norris, in his demand for a lobbying inquiry, said:

"If anybody is going to do anything about the business recession, it will have to be the President, because business won't."

Utility and other large corporations, he declared, are in league with most newspapers "to fight everything the President wants."

Norris said a revival of the Senate inquiry, started in 1935 under Hugo L. Black, would "bring out things that would open the eyes of the country." The House revolt against the administration's wage-hour bill, he asserted, was traceable to strenuous lobbying activities.

Irish Free State Ends as 'Eire' Walks Alone

Independent Nation Of 26 Counties Marks Day

DUBLIN, Dec. 29 (AP)—The 15-year-old Irish Free State passed officially into history today and its 26 counties of old Ireland became Eire.

A new constitution took effect, giving the former Free State a new government and a new name—Eire in Gaelic and Ireland in English. Eamon de Valera, its sponsor, has declared the new document is a milestone in Dublin's political march away from London.

Religious and military ceremonies throughout the country commemorated the first "Constitution Day."

Republican planned to hold protest meetings in the center of Dublin, but no special precautions, apparently, had been taken to prevent possible disorders.

At midnight a black flag was hoisted over Sinn Fein headquarters in Parnell Square to signify disapproval of the Constitution. Authorities made no attempt to remove it.

Editorials in three Dublin papers seemed to exemplify the country's three points of view on the change—for it, against it, or indifferent.

The Irish Press said:

"It marks the opening of a new era for Ireland—It marks her entry into full stature of nationhood."

The Independent, an anti-De Valera organ, declared the new constitution:

"Contains clauses which possibly may be used to interfere with freedom of speech, freedom of the press, freedom of associations and rights of women."

The Irish Times held:

"It would not make 'the slightest difference to the lives of the people."

BRITISH DECISION DUE

Both official London and official Ulster, where Northern Ireland leaders have refused to consider union with Eire, De Valera's goal, watched the situation closely. Soon the British government must decide whether it accepts Eire as the name of the former Free State.

Several English papers took mild digs at De Valera's new title, taoiseach, or prime minister, by comparing it to "Der Fuehrer" and "Il Duce."

The new constitution calls for a two-chamber legislature with a prime minister and a president. A president to take the place of De Valera, who became prime minister, and a senate still were to be chosen.

Workers to Pay Textile Mill's Bills

New Bedford, Dec. 29 (AP)—A proposal whereby workers of the Neild Mill would contribute 10 per cent of their weekly wages toward a fund to satisfy pressing creditors of the corporation was unanimously accepted here this afternoon by nearly 400 second-shift workers gathered at a special meeting.

The meeting and the proposal were sponsored by New Bedford textile council through its advisory committee. In return for the 10 per cent deduction from their pay, the workers would receive shares of stock, possibly preferred.

De Valera Greets World On Birth of New 'Eire'

On the eve of the New Year's birth of Ireland's new state to be known as "Eire," President Eamon De Valera of the Irish Free State wrote exclusively for International News Service the following message of greeting to America and the world.

By EAMON DE VALERA
(President of the Irish Free State)

(Copyright, 1937, by International News Service)

DUBLIN, Dec. 29 (INS)—The children of Ireland in the United States will rejoice with one another at the coming into operation of the constitution which the Irish people have recently given themselves by their votes in the plebiscite.

This national code marks the close of one epoch and the opening of another.

It recognizes the undying aspiration of the Irish people for political independence; it provides the organs of state by which that independence can be maintained, and it gives the Irish people the power to solve their social problems in accordance with their own genius and traditions.

This power coming at this time makes it possible for the new Ireland, if she wills, to be by her example a light to the other nations as she was to Europe centuries ago in the great days of her former freedom.

Wife Wounded, Cambridge Man Held

Tearoom Hostess, 25, Is Shot During Rendezvous

John J. McCarthy, 30, of Magoun street, Cambridge, was held in Concord court today after he pleaded not guilty to a charge of assault with intent to murder his estranged wife.

The case was continued until January 11 and McCarthy was taken to East Cambridge jail, unable to furnish bail.

According to police, the wounding of Mrs. Ethel E. McCarthy, 25, a Lexington tearoom hostess, and the arrest of her estranged husband, followed a rendezvous arranged to settle terms of a divorce.

TELLS OF LOVE

The woman was found by doctors at Symmes Arlington Hospital when they answered a night bell. Half conscious, she had been placed on the steps, doctors told police.

A short while later, McCarthy walked into Lexington police station and surrendered. He said his wife had been shot accidentally and asked frantically that police find out for him how badly she was hurt.

"I love her dearly," McCarthy sobbed, according to police.

"All I'm worried about is how she is. Please find out for me."

POLICE FIND GUN

McCarthy then took police to a deserted section of Maple street, Lexington, where he showed them where he said he had thrown away a gun. Police found a .22 calibre revolver.

Meanwhile, doctors removed a slug from the woman's face, lodged below the left temple. They said she had a good chance for recovery.

Police said McCarthy only recently left a Waltham hospital where he had been under treatment for four years.

165 Hurt in Train Wreck in Mexico

LOS ANGELES, Dec 29 (INS)—In a train wreck near Mexico City today, 165 persons, most of them from Los Angeles, were bruised, shaken and suffered from shock but none was seriously hurt, according to a brief telephone call describing the accident received here.

Those aboard the 14-car train of the National Railways of Mexico were members of a Christmas tour party.

The message said the train, returning north from Mexico City, was derailed when the locomotive hit a broken rail. Two cars in the center of the train, a sleeping car and a diner, were overturned, the message added.

Among those known to have been on the train were Mary Rose Case, 17, the Salinas, Calif., "Rodeo Queen", her mother, Mrs. E. W. Case, and her brother, Edward Case.

Missing Girl Returns Home

Located by Phone Call to Friend

After an absence of eight days, 14-year-old Anna Robards is back in her Newton home and satisfied to remain there.

Penniless, hungry and discouraged, Anna called a Newton friend from a South End telephone. The message was relayed to her parents and Boston police located her, fed her and 'phoned her father to take her home.

When she left home, the girl went to friends in Waltham. They gave her money to go to the movies in Boston Monday, but she didn't have carfare for the return trip and spent the night walking the streets, she said.

Held in Wife's Shooting

John J. McCarthy of Cambridge sits in a Lexington police station cell awaiting arraignment in Concord district court following the shooting of his estranged wife, Mrs. Ethel McCarthy, 25, tea room hostess. Police said that after she had been found wounded on the doorstep of an Arlington hospital, he walked into headquarters and said the shooting had been accidental.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Dec. 29—The young sports writers' annual story was around to see us the other day.

Every year some old-timer points out to some young sports writer a face behind the wicket of a pari-mutuels window, and says:

"That's Rube Marquard. He's the guy who once won 19 straight ball games."

Damon Runyon

The old-timer will add a few slightly garbled details of Rube Marquard's career, and thus the young sports writer has the story that some other young sports writer will write the following year.

You might say that Rube Marquard has become a sort of institution as an annual story. This because his occupation keeps him more or less on public view. He has been working for some years past around the race tracks, selling or cashing pari-mutuel tickets, generally working in Florida, or New England.

Marquard was a naive chap when he first appeared in the big league. The circumstances of his appearance made a great story to begin with. McGraw had bought him for $11,000 from Indianapolis, and that price, which is what they pay batboys nowadays, was a huge figure then. Rube got a tremendous amount of publicity.

McGraw put him in to pitch at the Polo Grounds toward the close of the season the same year of the purchase and Marquard was massacred by the opposition and became known as "The $11,000 Lemon." A couple of years later he was one of the greatest pitchers in the business, and dirt cheap at the price McGraw paid.

Marquard was a tall, slender chap, with a wry neck, which oddly enough, aided him in the deception of a pitching motion with a runner on first that has never been equalled by any pitcher. He was a nifty dresser, and liked Broadway, and show people, and he married a vaudeville star, Blossom Seeley, now Mrs. Bennie Fields.

HIT IN VAUDEVILLE

Blossom took Rube into vaudeville with her, and he was pretty good, at that. He rose to his greatest fame when he won nineteen straight games for the Giants, equalling a record set up many years before by Tom Keefe, another Giant pitcher.

Rube was about 23 years old when he came to the big league and he remained 23 for quite awhile afterwards. We discussed this mystery only a couple of days ago with Josh Devore who was one of Rube's teammates with the Giants, and who roomed with Rube. Josh was a little fellow who played left field for McGraw and led off the batting order of the fastest ball club in all history.

"How old is Rube?" we asked Josh.

"He says he is," replied Josh. "I'm over 50, and Rube was older than I was when we played together, so figure it out for yourself."

Josh Devore came from Chillicothe, Ohio, which had another claim to sporting fame in being the home of a great race mare called Imp. When Imp came home in the winter from the racing wars the whole town used to turn out behind a band to welcome her.

WINS WAGER ON SELF

Josh Devore is the only man we ever heard of who won a wager betting he was himself. It happened after one of the World Series in which McGraw's Giants engaged, and Josh was on his way home to Ohio by motor. He looked like a little boy then.

In a barroom in Erie, Pa., when a goodly throng was there, he mentioned to a local citizen that he was Josh Devore of the Giants, and the citizen laughed right out loud, and everybody else present laughed with him. Slightly piqued, Josh insisted on his claim to being Josh Devore of the Giants, and the citizen said:

"I'll bet you $50 you ain't."

Josh took the bet, and they went over to a newspaper office and settled it in Josh's favor by photos in the sports editor's files. Josh played in an old-timers' game here the other day and Marquard pitched a couple of innings, and when Josh got a single off him, Rube threw away his glove, and sighed, and said:

"Now I know I'm all through."

So he has gone back to his pari-mutuels window and his role as the young sports writers' annual story.

George Sauter Dies

BRANDENBURG, Germany, Dec. 29—George Sauter, winner of a Carnegie medal for painting, is dead here. He was 71.

Don Marquis, Creator Of 'Old Soak,' Dies at 59

NEW YORK, Dec. 29 (AP)—Don Marquis, pioneer newspaper columnist whose satire won him wide fame in the literary and theatrical worlds, died at his home today after a long illness. He was 59.

Marquis, described by his close friend, Christopher Morley, as "the most philosophical humorist in this country," had been ill since 1936, when he suffered the first of a series of shocks which sapped his strength and finances.

With him at the end were his two sisters, the Misses Bernice and Neva Marquis, who had attended him almost constantly in his home at Forest Hills, Long Island.

HAPPY CHRISTMAS

Despite the paralysis which gripped him, Marquis was said to have spent "a wonderful day" on Christmas.

The following day, Sunday, he was able to receive a few friends, including Morley, but last night he turned worse, rallying only once before falling into his last sleep.

Creator of the beloved "Old Soak," "Archy the Cockroach," "Mehitabel, the Alley Cat" and a host of other characters whose antics stirred nation-wide laughter, Don Marquis belonged to a pioneer era of newspaper columnists.

HIS "ARCHY" ACTIVE

Besides the "Old Soak" and "Archy the Cockroach," who wrote on a typewriter at night when Marquis was away, entirely in lower case letters, because he couldn't use the shift-key, Marquis characters also included Mehitabel, the alley cat, who was frankly disreputable; Captain Peter Fitzurse, the unconquered raconteur; Fothergill Finch of the beautiful gesture, and the Fair Hermione and her little group of Serious Thinkers.

Charge Politics Over Insurance Licensing

Auto Firm President Assails De Celles At Hearing

Charge that "political interference" was connected with the refusal of Insurance Commissioner Francis J. De Celles to issue a license to his company, was made at a State House hearing today by William J. Howard, president of the Broad Street Mutual Casualty Insurance Co. of Boston.

The hearing was hastily called by Commissioner De Celles after guards at the State Public Works building, Nashua street, were summoned to his office to handle a crowd of more than a hundred persons protesting the commissioner's failure to issue the license.

As the hearing moved to Room 436 at the State House, Commissioner De Celles told newspapermen it was a "nasty mess."

BLAMES POLITICS

Howard was the first witness called by Attorney Herbert S. Avery, counsel for the company.

The witness declared during his testimony:

"I am of the opinion that there is political interference connected with the non-issuance of a license to our company.

"There is no reason under the law why we should not receive a license immediately."

Howard declared his company received its charter last August 31, after attempting to form a company for two years, "only to get no action from Commissioner De Celles until last summer."

"The insurance commissioner made every step of ours most difficult," Howard stated.

ASSAILS DE CELLES

Bitterly assailing Commissioner De Celles, Howard testified that Miss Catherine O'Leary, chief examiner of the state insurance department, and even De Celles informed him he had complied with all the requirements necessary to obtain a license.

The witness told of several conferences he had with the insurance commissioner to "get the information whether he would or wouldn't get a license" and on each occasion, Howard stated, De Celles told him:

"I can't issue a license."

"e (DeCelles) evaded the issue when I asked him concerning the issuance o the license. I asked him if the reason was political interference and he made no comment," Howard testified.

Howard said that Commissioner Decelles approved the board of directors he submitted; that he filed the $100,000 bond requested by DeCelles to indemnify subscribers; that he put up $25,000 capital and submitted to the commissioner subscriptions totalling $100,212.46.

Howard said he informed Commissioner DeCelles that it was imperative that he obtain a license since he was losing between $50,000 and $100,000 a day in subscriptions which had been lined up by agents.

Leviathan Scrap To Kill Thousands

Famed Liner Will Become Engine Of Death

By W. W. CHAPLIN

International News Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Dec. 29—The S. S. Leviathan, dowager queen of the seas, built at the start of the World War "to end war," is to end her existence dealing death on modern battlefields, it was learned today.

Manned by a skeleton crew, the rusted tramp which was once the pride of the Atlantic, will be sailed next month from its Hoboken pier to a Scottish junk yard for conversion into scrap.

And the biggest buyers in the scrap metal market of today are the warring and warlike nations of Europe and Asia. This was acknowledged here by both buyer and seller of the 49,000-ton hulk.

Before the spring, cannon made from the fine steel of the Leviathan's tempered hull will be hurling shot and shell made from the ship's baser parts among warriors of many nations.

BOUGHT BY SIMPSON

Born as the Vaterland under the spirit of the German Kaiser's ambitions of conquest, the great ship will die a thousand deaths in places where that spirit still exists and she may well drag down to death with her thousands of soldiers and civilians.

The latest phase of the Leviathan's existence began recently when Ernest Simpson, divorced husband of the Duchess of Windsor, came here to marry Mrs. Jacques Raffray.

Simpson is a member of the ships brokerage firm of Simpson, Spence & Young and while here he closed a deal to buy the Leviathan for $800,000, a bargain price made possible by a sharp drop in the scrap metal market.

The United States Lines, which had owned the Leviathan ever since it was seized from Germany as reparations during the war, had expected to get $1,250,000 for her. But apparently the nations at war and those preparing for its possibility all began scrapping metal together, stored up a world surplus and the market dived.

SPLENDOR IN RUINS

So America's greatest troopship and at one time the pride of her merchant marine was knocked down, lock, stock and barrel for a comparative song, though a song still measured to martial tread.

Today the Leviathan is a dim ghost of a ship, fine furniture and costly rugs shrouded with dust coverings, plaster falling from the ceilings of salons and night clubs, red rust shining through the paint. There are five great pictures which once belonged to the Kaiser and which the United States lines insured for $250,000. They were thrown in for good measure because there is no market for such mammoth treasures.

The Leviathan was docked three years ago in Hoboken when it was retired as a flagship of the United States Lines. It was feared that silt had drifted so deep about its hull that it might have to be dredged out for its last voyage, but it has been found to be still floating free.

And so within a couple of weeks a dozen tugs will back the ancient ship into North river, and, with her old turbines pounding once again, she will sail on a sort of suicide voyage which will end in death to herself and to countless humans.

Radioed Symphony Copies Approved

Boston Symphony Orchestra officials said today "entirely satisfactory" copies were being made of parts of Jan Sibelius' choral symphony, "Origin of Fire," which were radioed across the Atlantic last night, and that the work of the famous Finnish composer would be heard for the first time in America Friday afternoon as scheduled.

In the radio-photographic transmission of the scores, officials said, some of the notes were blurred and obscured, but not so seriously that an expert music copyist could not repair the flaws.

Police Campaign On Chelsea Breaks

Chelsea police today began a drive to wipe out a recent epidemic of house and store breaks that has resulted in seven successful and four attempted robbberies in the past five days.

Loot valued at more than $400 was obtained in the latest outbreak of thefts, which has kept police busy for more than a month.

Bostonians Stay By China Posts

Two Greater Boston men are the two remaining Americans at Ningpo, China, according to word received today in Boston.

They are Dr. Harold Thomas of Wollaston and Dr. H. R. S. Benjamin, a brother of Dr. H. Weston Benjamin of the Boston Dispensary. Both are remaining at the Baptist Hospital there.

Race Horse Suffocated

RED BANK, N. J., Dec. 29 (INS)—Pound Foolish, two-year-old full sister of the great Twenty Grand, suffocated last night in a fire which damaged a barn of Mrs. Payne Whitney's Greentree Farm at nearby Lincroft. Twenty-two other horses, including St. Germain, sire of Twenty Grand, were saved.

Mercy Ride Hit In Worcester

WORCESTER, Dec. 29 (AP)—The Worcester District Medical Society "wished gently to chide" the authorities who caused Lucene Ruth Shearer, 5, to be rushed 138 miles across the state Monday for an emergency operation because she had swallowed a safety pin.

In a car led by police escort, the trip was made in two hours and 25 minutes from Pittsfield to Boston.

The statement said in part:

"The means taken to relieve the child were available in Springfield, 50 miles from Pittsfield; in all the hospitals in Worcester, 90 miles from Pittsfield, and probably in other places the child was rushed through.

"The risks which she had to undergo in that fast ride and the danger to traffic all the way could have been avoided and relief obtained hours and miles sooner."

O'Hara Indicted In Providence

PROVIDENCE, Dec. 29 (INS)—Adding new woes to those already piled on Walter E. O'Hara, Narragansett Park horse race track owner, the Providence County grand jury today indicted him for criminal libel.

The indictment charged that O'Hara libelled William H. Beenan, New York advertising man, in a special edition of his erstwhile newspaper, now sold. He must appear in superior court next Tuesday to answer the indictment.

Decision Reserved On Lappen Divorce

Mrs. Louise H. Lappen of Ridgemont street, Allston, former overseas war nurse, was defendant today in divorce proceedings brought by John A. Lappen, a salesman, of Washington street, Belmont. The case was taken under advisement by Judge George Toland in Middlesex Probate Court. Lappen charged desertion.

Lappen had been granted a separation decree in 1933, at which time he testified his wife deserted him. Mrs. Lappen, who is receiving 50 per cent disability compensation from the government, testified today that she had made repeated attempts to bring about a reconciliation.

Suspended Term For Carrying Gun

Thomas Buckley, 27, Cambridge laborer, today was given a six months' suspended sentence in East Cambridge district court after he had been found guilty of carrying a revolver.

At the same time, Judge Arthur P. Stone dismissed a charge of mutilating the serial number of the gun, which Buckley had taken to Cambridge police headquarters on Dec. 23. The defendant had pleaded innocent to both charges.

$2,000,000 Land Fraud Victims in Bay State

NEW YORK, Dec. 29 (AP)—Attorney General John J. Bennett, Jr., today announced indictment of 39 persons and 12 corporations in what he called a $2,000,000 Long Island real estate swindle.

Bennett said the victims, many of whom were struggling immigrants living in the mill towns of New Jersey, Connecticut and Massachusetts and in the mining communities of Pennsylvania, were fleeced of their life savings.

The grand jury, which found that lots in a scrub-oak wasteland on Long Island were sold at fabulous prices on the promise that an attractive development would spring up, recommended that the case be referred to postal authorities for further investigation.

During the inquiry by his office one of the principals committed suicide in New Jersey.

"Victims were high-pressured into a state bordering upon hysteria," Bennett said.

"Foreign language newspapers hailed this community as a piece of the homeland in America, where native customs and costumes would be revived, where the native language would be used, where mill workers and tenement dwellers would find an ideal community life with their families, and where everyone would be given employment at jobs paying not less than $35 a week."

Radio War Aid To Poor Arabs

Britain, Italy Give Many Free Sets

JERUSALEM, Dec. 29 (AP)—Prospects of a radio propaganda war between the Italians and the British delighted Arabs today, leading them to believe they would receive thousands of free radio sets from London and Rome.

The Italian government already has distributed free sets among Arabs, so that they might pick up government broadcasts of news and propaganda to Palestine and the Near East from a station in southern Italy.

British authorities were understood to be ready to flood the Holy Land with short-wave sets, which could be tuned in on a British station.

Just to add to the fun, local broadcasting stations, opposed to the foreign programs, try to drown the foreign broadcasts with interference.

Wellesley Faces 2 School Heads

Wellesley was faced today with the possibility of having two school superintendents.

Judging only on the facts contained in his position and the demurrer filed by the Wellesley school committee, the Supreme Court ruled Dr. S. Monroe Graves was illegally ousted as superintendent.

A single justice or an auditor will determine for the court whether the allegations in Dr. Graves petition for reinstatement are true.

As a result of the supreme court's decision, the question was raised in legal circles today whether the town will have to pay back salary at an annual rate of $6000, covering the litigation period of about 18 months.

Edwin H. Miner, Dartmouth graduate and formerly of Washington, has been functioning as school superintendent. He was named after Dr. Graves was ousted in July, 1936.

The complexion of the school committee has changed since then. The chairman has retired and the committee has been increased from three to five. A majority of the present committee did not participate in Dr. Graves' removal.

McKinley Bugler Rites Held in Hull

Funeral services were held in Hull today for Charles A. Melvin, 67, army bugler, who blew taps for the martyred President William McKinley.

Melvin served as regimental bugler during the Spanish-American War, the Boxer uprising and on the Mexican border. He died two days ago.

Users of 3 Piers Urge Action On Bus Line

Service by Private Concern to End as City Dallies

By ROBERT L. GREEN

The 6000 to 7000 users of the Commonwealth, Fish and Army Base piers will probably find a harsher term than "Chinese Wall" if the city fathers' dalliance over the final O. K. fails to provide adequate service to these piers next Monday.

Last Monday the council tabled the final approval that would give the El the franchise permitting it to take over the bus service of a private company that operates direct transportation to the busy Summer street pier system.

Councillors meet again Friday to give further consideration to the Boston Elevated's purchase of the company's franchise.

MILE-LONG WALK

Should the approval again be tabled the thousands of commuters who use the pier face long cold walks from the Summer street car line, and it is expected that little pride will be then manifested in the one-mile length of the Army Base pier.

The private company has posted notices in its buses that it will discontinue its service the night of December 31.

It had been the plan of the El to run a shuttle bus service from the street car line to the piers, which in itself makes for no great convenience, but the delay in the council threatens to halt even that service.

• • •

The flow of scrap metal out of this port continues unabated. The Greek freighter Kalypso Vergotti newly arrived will spend two weeks at the Army Base loading 7,350 tons of the old metal for an unannounced European port.

• • •

Speculation continues to run rife at the Army Base as to the possible uses the Japanese will have for the huge cargo of asbestos that the freighter Tokai Maru is loading for Yokohama at the Army Base. The asbestos, 34 freight car loads of it, was shipped by rail from Nova Scotia.

Dublin Players 'Live for Theater'

Abbey Group Brings Best Of Irish Drama to Hub

By ANN MARSTERS

How much do you know about the Abbey Theater Players from Dublin? Nearly everyone knows something about them—(and like as not, those who don't, pretend they do).

Now that the players are here for several weeks' engagement at the Shubert-Copley Theater, I have been learning more about them from talking to two delightful members of the company—Eileen Crowe and Maureen Delany.

Miss Delany is an abundant individual, with eyes that can't help but twinkle every now and then. She appears in the current production of "The Far Off Hills," and later on you will see her as the Widow Quinn in Synge's "The Playboy of the Western World," and as Bessie Burgess in O'Casey's "The Plough and the Stars."

PRODUCE PLAY A WEEK

And this, as she told us, is how the Abbey Theater functions:

"We work in the theater 48 weeks out of 52," said Miss Delany. "We produce a different play each week—and there are rehearsals every morning."

"But," interrupted Miss Crowe (who has a twinkle of her own), "if one of us ever wins the Irish sweepstakes, we'll take a vacation for 48 weeks. We've all vowed to divide the money, no matter who wins it."

"Meanwhile," went on Miss Delany, "we have about 300 plays in our repertoire. And there are about 20 or 30 plays which we could present practically without a rehearsal. We come to know them backwards and forwards.

"The road company, the one which is now on tour, consists of 14 players. But at home, there are at least 40 indefinite players connected with the theater. And while we are on tour, the 'second' company carries on in Dublin.'

FOURTH AMERICAN TOUR

This, incidentally, is the fourth American tour of the present company. In all, the Abbey players have made seven visits to America.

If they would admit to having "stars," Eileen Crowe would, of course, be one of their finest. She plays Marion in "The Far Off Hills," and Juno in "Juno and the Paycock."

"None of us," said Miss Crowe, "ever think of gaining personal glory in our work; we don't care about having our names in big letters on a marquee; we never quarrel about who's going to have the best part or the most lines. That, you see, is why we all get along so well together."

"I think," said Miss Delany, "that we are the best-natured people in the world."

She laughed, and Miss Crowe laughed, and they both nodded their heads in agreement.

SECRET OF HARMONY

"The real secret of the harmony in our company," said Miss Delany, "is complete lack of jealousy."

And that, they will admit, is a condition which is hardly ever found in any profession—especially the theater.

Low Prices Seen As Slump Cure

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Dec. 9—A slash in wages and the price of finished goods was advocated before economists here by Professor Oliver M. W. Sprague of the Harvard School of Business Administration.

Professor Sprague said the decline in industry might have resulted from high prices for finished products, and suggested prices be reduced by cutting wages of skilled workers.

Uruguay Seizes Argentine Island

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 29 (INS)—Uruguayan naval forces have occupied Argentine-claimed Garcia Island in the River Plate, advices from the frontier said today.

Seizure of the island, ownership of which has been long disputed between the Argentine and Uruguay, may lead to a warlike crisis between the two neighboring nations, it was feared here.

Greta the Great Relaxes

International News Photograph Service

Thawing to newspapermen on her arrival in Sweden on a jaunt that may be permament, Greta Garbo completely relaxed from her accustomed icy reserve. Here she is, hair windblown, attired in simple traveling clothes, as she chatted with home reporters.

'Rosalie' Wins Wide Praise

"Rosalie," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's mighty successor to "The Great Ziegfeld," co-starring Nelson Eddy and Eleanor Powell, will open Friday at both Loew's State and Orpheum Theaters.

Nelson Eddy and Eleanor Powell are teamed for the first time in this tuneful melange, which varies in locale between an Army-Navy football game, West Point, a trans-atlantic airplane and the colorful mythical kingdom of "Romanza."

It is reported the picture is the most lavish production ever attempted in Hollywood, outdoing even "The Great Ziegfeld"—especially during the "Romanza" sequence—a tremendous white and silver kingdom presided over by Frank Morgan as a king with an eye for a pretty girl and Edna May Oliver as a queen quite able to curb such tendencies.

Ray Bolger, he of the rubber legs, comes in for his dancing specialties, while Ilona Massey, a blonde newcomer from Budapest, makes her American debut as the second lead of the picture in the part of Countess Brenda, and is said to be a singer of extraordinary range.

All the songs are created and written by Cole Porter and include the title of the pictures "Rosalie," "Who Knows," "In the Still of the Night," "It's All Over But the Shout" and "To Love Or Not to Love." There are several ballet dance numbers staged by Albertina Rasch for the enormous Romanza sequences in the best tradition of the ballet mistress.

The picture was written by W. S. Van Dyke and produced by William Anthony McGuire.

Winchell Film For Paramount

The management of the Paramount Theater has completed arrangements for one of the most elaborate New Year's Eve midnight show programs in the history of the popular downtown movie house.

The New England premiere showing of "Love and Hisses" Twentieth Century Fox's production co-starring Walter Winchell, Ben Bernie and Simone Simon, coupled with "Thank You, Mr. Moto," co-starring Peter Lorre, Pauline Frederick and Jayne Regan, will be the top feature. This program will be presented for one showing only on New Year's Eve.

All seats are reserved and are now on sale at the box office.

Eve Winter's Sight Periled by Crash

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 29 (INS)—Little hope was held for the complete sight of Eve Winter, actress injured in an automobile crash here while riding with film director Henry Lehrman.

Doctors said she will lose the sight of one eye permanently, while the other will be seriously impaired. Lehrman, also injured in the crash, faces reckless driving charges.

Met Will Stage Special Show

The Metropolitan Theater announces that a gala New Year's Eve midnight show is scheduled to begin promptly at 12 o'clock and to continue well into the early hours of the morning.

Arranged for this one performance only on both stage and screen is an entirely new program that includes the first New England performance of Twentieth Century-Fox's musical hit, "Love and Hisses," starring Walter Winchell.

Two First-Run Films for Hub

Two first-run feature pictures, "Swing It Professor" and "Paradise Isle," will make up the new program opening on Friday at the Hub Theater.

"Swing It Professor" co-stars Pinky Tomlin, who has been dubbed by Eddie Cantor, "Public Swingster No. 1," and Paula Stone, daughter of Fred Stone, the famous dancer, and tells the story of a college professor who quits rather than teach swing.

"Paradise Isle" co-stars Warren Hull and Movita and is an adaptation of the Cosmopolitan story, "The Belled Palm."

Gala New Year's Eve at Howard

At the Old Howard this week is Margie Hart, that "Daredevil of Burlesque," in "Night Owls," an enjoyable comedy, which has played to capacity audiences.

On Friday night, the annual gala and spectacular New Year's Eve midnight show will be presented, starting at midnight. Besides the regular show there will be a number of new acts imported from New York especially for this occasion.

PARAMOUNT'S THUNDERING ROMANCE OF THE WINNING OF THE WEST!

Against the flaming background of the mightiest chapter in our whole history, the winning of the West, Frank Lloyd tells the moving, heart-stirring story of a brave man and a bold-hearted woman whose love, stronger even than the forces of a nation's destiny, survives the perils of the wilderness, the roaring dangers of the gold rush, the soul warping horrors of war itself...

BOSTON after DARK

By GEORGE HOLLAND

JOTTINGS: Brad Greene, composer of "Right This Way," has been given another extension of his leave of absence from the Navy . . . The extension was granted Alice Alexander, producer of the show, in answer to cable sent President Roosevelt, when he was yachting on the Potomac (the ship not the river).

Young Greene, a Bostonian, joined the navy to study music rather than to see the world through a porthole . . . He was assigned to a training-school band, and instructed in the use of cymbals, although his piano-playing approaches virtuosity . . . The newest leave of absence extends until "the show opens in New York'—next Monday . . . Then young Greene becomes a gob again.

As if Mae West isn't having her troubles on the West Coast because of that radio skit, the Old Howard is billing the star of the January 10 show as follows: "Mr. Mae West (In Person) — Frank Wallace, past, present and future husband of Mae West — with Trixie Lamae, in a sensational Apache and Novelty Dance Offering."

Rita, who presides at the telephone switchboard a few offices down the corridor, just received a call from the chief of police of Augusta, Maine . . . "We're holding a man up here on charges of drunkenness and passing bad checks. He has given his address at 8 Hancock street," the chief said. "Would you mind checking on the address for us?" . . . Obliging as always, Rita did the necessary research . . . The address was that of a Chinese laundry.

At police headquarters here, the Special Service Squad is unanimous in predicting that Buddy Chase, the troubador from the bureau of records, is a future Dick Powell.

HUMAN INTEREST:—

B. V. Drohan, the South Boston cherub, was guiding four slightly-used minstrels toward Andover as his good deed for Christmas Eve . . . At Andover, the Drohan charges were to be rewarded with $5 each for singing at a private party . . . Walking up School street, the Drohan troupe encountered a politician-friend of B. V. D., who felt like hearing a little singing himself.

Benny does the the thinking for his troubadors, and the politician's promise of a steak-dinner all-around was appealing . . . It was slushy and wet and Andover seemed a long way distant, anyway . . . So the party convened to the politician's suite, where their particular brand of caroling continued until late in the morning . . . But it almost ended tragically . . . The politician gave each of Drohan's singers a hundred dollar bill . . . The shock was nearly fatal.

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY:

On page 32, the past issue of "Life," a reproduction of Gainsborough's "The Honorable Frances Duncan," in the Frick collection, gives the subject such a startling resemblance to this journal's Ann Marsters that a dozen correspondents have written to this department already . . . The Boston Friars Club annual New Year's Eve Frolic at the Hotel Statler is a $20-a couple celebration this year, and only a few tables are unreserved at this writing. Recession? . . .

Jack Ford Signs Fox Contract

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor International News Service

Copyright, 1937, by International News Service.

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 29—Director Jack Ford, who gave the world "The Informer," "Arrowsmith," "Hurricane," "Lost Patrol," etc., etc., has just put his John Hancock to a long term contract with 20th Century-Fox.

Louella O. Parsons

Darryl Zanuck, who leaves for New York Saturday with Joseph Schenck and Sid Grauman, signed the ticket yesterday. Ford's first assignment is "Four Men and a Prayer," the Cosmopolitan magazine yarn by David Garth which was so widely read at the time of its publication.

And now about the players you will see in "Four Men and a Prayer." Loretta Young, whose 1937 box office rating landed her right up in the top brackets, is the star. Zanuck is trying to corral Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., to play opposite her and since that new Fairbanks-RKO contract gives him permission to make outside pictures, Doug will probably check in at 20th Century-Fox.

The chances of George Arliss making the life of John D. Rockefeller are becoming exceedingly remote for the reason that the Rockefellers are opposed to having the philanthropist founder of their family pictured on the screen.

Arliss is now in town, having come to California for a vacation in Santa Barbara and Hollywood. While here the British actor will discuss with several of the studios the idea of a screen biography of Sir Basil Zaharoff, munitions king of Europe whose colorful life was so much publicized and yet who was really a mystery man so far as his origin is concerned.

Jimmy Durante is all set to start off the new year with more good luck than he has had in ages. Jimmy hit a snag a couple of years ago and couldn't seem to get back in his stride. But now reports are that he is so terrifically funny in "Sally, Irene and Mary" that 20th Century-Fox has handed him a new long term contract, and he will rate a very good role in Shirley (Queen of the Box Office) Temple's next, "Little Miss Broadway."

* * *

A line or two: Hear Mae West is heartsick over the fact that her advisors have suggested that she cancel her personal appearance tour until the radio furore has died down—but she has given in and the deal is off . . . Hear tell Hassard Short, Broadway producer of "Band Wagon," "As Thousands Cheer" and "The Great Waltz" among other hits, isn't out here entirely for his health, or the Santa Anita season. Two major studios are in the market for his services.

Snapshots of Hollywood

SIMONE SIMON, in bed with a bad cold, temporarily out of the cast of "Josette"; JANE WITHERS' doll total is now 600, swelled by 38 new ones she received for Christmas; "Stars Fell On Alabama" yesterday, the lads on the football team met and lunched with BETTE DAVIS, DICK POWELL, ROSEMARY and PRISCILLA LANE, WAYNE MORRIS and MARGARET LINDSAY at a WARNER luncheon. JACK WARNER made a speech; DISNEY'S injured arm carried in a sling was caused by a fall and not by the thousands of handshakes he received after the premiere of "Snow White."

'Our Kingdom for a Barber!'

The Yacht Club Boys, always in the top rank among entertainment world leaders, are shown doing their stuff in this scene from "Thrill of a Liftime," which opens tomorrow at the Paramount and the Fenway.

Nelson Eddy and Ilona Massey give melody and charm to "Rosalie," new musical film coming to Loew's State and Orpheum on Friday. Eleanor Powell is co-starred with Eddy.

Midnight Show At the Gayety

A special midnight show will be held New Year's Eve at the Gayety Theater, starting at 10:40 and continuous until 3 a. m.

A giant double feature program will be shown in addition to comedies and other shorts. "Dead End," with Sylvia Sidney and Joel McCrea, will be the principal feature, coupled with "Oh! Doctor," starring Edward Everett Horton.

Old West On Met's Screen

"Wells Fargo," the new Frank Lloyd production enthusiastically proclaimed by critics and patrons at a local "sneak" preview as one of the outstanding film hits in motion picture history, is scheduled to open a week's engagement tomorrow on the screen of the Metropolitan.

Sharing honors on the same program is a gala holiday revue featuring the distinctive rhythms of Little Jack Little and his orchestra in person, together with a big cast that includes Eddie Peabody, popular instrumental stylist, the Rigoletto Brothers, Joe and Jane McKenna, The Three Andrews Sisters, Hal Menken, and the Swing-O-Pators.

Joel McCrea, Frances Dee and Bob Burns head the big cast of "Wells Fargo," Paramount's brilliant story of empire building that was directed by Frank Lloyd, only motion picture director to have won three Academy Awards and famous for such hits as "Cavalcade," "Mutiny on the Bounty."

Painted on an heroic canvas, "Wells Fargo" traces the history of the opening of the West from the time of the discovery of gold at Sutter's Mill until the close of the war between the states, with the express business of Herb Wells and William Fargo forming the background. For romance the picture follows the love story of a typical western family headed by McCrea and Frances Dee, who are married at the beginning of the picture.

Owing to the keen interest of local theater-patrons in seeing "Wells Fargo," the management announces a revised schedule for each weekday of the engagement with the first stage show starting at 10:15 a. m.

Astaire's First Solo Film

Fred Astaire in his first solo starring picture with George Burns and Gracie Allen, RKO Radio's "A Damsel in Distress," sparkling with catchy Gershwin tunes and with one of P. G. Wodehouse's stories as its basis, comes to Keith Memorial theater on Friday. "The Spy Ring" will be the companion feature.

"A Damsel in Distress" will have two preview showings tomorrow evening, the first at 7 and the second at 10.

Joan Fontaine has the title-role and Reginald Gardner, Ray Noble, Constance Collier, Montague Love and Harry Watson and other celebrities head the cast of the musical romance, which deals with a fantastic love affair between an American dancer and a titled British girl.

Astaire is the dancer, a bashful and retiring man, who has been given a great build-up in the London papers as a "heart-breaker" through the efforts of his publicity agents, Burns and Allen, and who is heartily sick of the whole thing. Miss Fontaine plays the girl, who is trying to avoid a distasteful marriage, while her servants at Totleigh Castle are violently divided on the question whom she should marry, and have organized their own sweepstakes on the event.

Cochrane Observed Christmas on High Seas

WE NEW ENGLANDERS consider Christmas to be so much of a day for quiet family gatherings in the ancestral home, and visiting of friends around gayly decorated fir trees, that it is pretty hard to conceive of celebrating Christmas Day aboard ship . . . especially a ship on the high seas thousands of miles from home . . . and almost completely out of reach of Christmas cards, brightly wrapped packages, or a doorbell to ring merrily, announcing the arrival of guests at the family hearth . . .

In spite of their keen interest in all the picturesque things they are seeing on a round the world cruise, Mrs. F. Douglas Cochrane of Commonwealth avenue, with her eldest daughter, Mary, and youngest son, F. Douglas, Jr., must have felt a few pangs of homesickness when they sat down to Christmas dinner aboard the ocean liner, twenty-four hours out of Singapore . . . and part way between two portions of the globe populated mostly by Moslems and Buddhists to whom Christmas means practically nothing . . .

The Cochranes are now in Singapore and expect to spend a few weeks travelling in India before heading West on the last few laps of their trip which will bring them home around the first of March . . .

Mr. Cochrane and his younger daughter, Ramelle, are spending the winter in their Commonwealth avenue home, and the other son of the family, Alexander Cochrane, who was married to Eugenie Grew last summer, is settled with his bride in their new home on Pinckney street . . .

• • •

Mr. and Mrs. August Zinsser, Jr., were guests of honor at a luncheon given yesterday by Robert Irwin in the Trianon Room of the Ambassador Hotel in New York, just before the couple sailed for their honeymoon in Bermuda . . . Mr. and Mrs. Zinsser (Carol Smith) were married Monday afternoon in Cambridge, and on their return from Bermuda will make their home on Crooked Mile road, Westport, Connecticut . . .

The bride's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. E. Everett Smith, Jr., of New York were among the guests at the bon voyage luncheon . . .

Notes From a Society Editor's Cuff

GLIMPSED MRS. EDMUND S. CHILDS of Lexington lunching at the Ritz-Carlton the other afternoon with Nancy Tenney, an attractive sub-debutante of Lexington, who is home from Miss Porter's School for the Christmas holidays . . . Mrs. Childs was dressed in a smart black costume with a Persian lamb swagger coat and matching fur turban and Miss Tenney wore one of the new chubby coats with a dark blue wool dress and hat . . . Betsy Cooper, debutante daughter of the Ernest R. Coopers of West Newton, is sailing January 21 for a trip abroad with her parents and her post deb sister, Mary Esther Cooper . . . To watch graceful and feminine Cynthia Gano being cut in on by the stags at festive holiday parties, one would never think that she is athletically inclined . . . yet she is manager of the freshman basketball team at Vassar, and takes part in a number of other outdoor sports . . . Anne Blake, post debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lowell Blake, is one of the guests at a holiday house party in the Berkshires, where Dr. and Mrs. Austen Briggs are hosts to their friends at their Stockbridge home . . .

Among Guests at Many Debutante Events

BETTY FIRUSKI BETTY SCUDDER

WITH THE DEBUTANTES' SEASON nearing an end, the Christmas vacation has brought about renewed activity in debutante circles, with the result that many parties are crowded into the week between Christmas and New Year's. Betty Firuski and Betty Scudder can be found at many of these events. Miss Firuski is the daughter of Mrs. Jennings Firuski of Cambridge and Miss Scudder's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop R. Scudder of Brookline.

Miss Miriam Comfrey To Wed Robert Hayes

Neither family reunions nor smart supper dances can deter Cupid from plying his old business of match-making.

Latest to join the ranks of the newly-engaged is Miriam Comfrey of Dorchester, whose engagement to Robert Hayes of Belmont was made known at a recent holiday tea at the home of her mother, Mrs. Joseph Comfrey.

Miriam, who is a graduate of Girls' high school and Boston School of Interior Decorating, was effectively costumed in velvet and gardenia as she received with her mother and her sisters, Patricia and Claire. The latter presided at the tea table. Assisting her was Frances Gill of West Roxbury.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. John Hayes of Belmont, parents of the future bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Sweeney of Belmont, Paul Frederick Sweeney, Eileen McCarthy, Jack Connell, Frances Doherty, Nonie and Julie Creehan and Corinne Tondorf. Also attending the pre-nuptial affair were Kathleen Millbury, Marjorie Duggan and Gertrude Yettman.

Mr. Hayes, who was graduated from Harvard with the class of 1937, studied at Browne and Nichols School.

• • •

At another recent tea, Mr. and Mrs. James F. Casby of Dorchester made known the bethrotal of their daughter, Cecelia, to Gerard Barry of Brighton.

Miss Casby, who is prominent in affairs of the Proparvulis Club, attended Roxbury Academy of Notre Dame and Marlborough Secretarial School. Mr. Barry was graduated from Mission Church high school and Northeastern University.

Newton Couples Visited by Stork

Receiving congratulations on the arrival of a daughter, Eileen, are Mr. and Mrs. William O'Mara of Newton. Mrs. O'Mara, the former Mary Appleyard, maintains an active interest in affairs of the Proparvulis Club.

Mr. and Mrs. John Ruddy are welcoming a daughter, Virginia, to their Newton home. Mrs. Ruddy before her marriage was Virginia Horgan, an active member of the Proparvulis Club.

At Notre Dame Dance

AGNES McHUGH WILLIAM HOGAN, JR.

A GAY COUPLE snapped at the Boston Notre Dame supper dance last evening at the Hotel Puritan were Agnes McHugh of Everett, and William Hogan, Jr., of Cambridge. Agnes, an attractive blonde, was effectively arrayed in colorful print for her duties as committee member for this annual get-together.

Notre Dame Supper Dance Is Gay Event

Gay grads of Boston Academy of Notre Dame shook the wrinkles out of their evening frocks, tucked a feather, a posy or some such doo-dad into their coiffures and were off to the Hotel Puritan for the annual supper dance last night.

Whites of both the material and surname variety, seemed to abound at the reunion. Priscilla White . . . her chalk white crepe effectively sashed with multi-colored sequins . . . was the capable chairman . . . Sister Phyllis offered her invaluable assistance.

Quite a few of the White aides affected white frocks . . . some in taffeta, others preferred chiffon, while quite a few remained faithful to serviceable white lace . . . Margaret McCarthy, escorted by Eddie Barry of Cambridge, sashed her white lace with bright red, while Betty Crosby's rustling white taffeta gown was embroidered with gilt thread.

PREFER BLUE GOWNS

The Mullinses from Winchester, favored sapphire blue . . . Jeannette's chiffon sported tri-colored straps while her shoulder length head-veil was depended upon to add chic to the costume . . . Loretta's ensemble had a knife-pleated skirt and one of those Grecian moulded bodices . . . Completing her party were Tommy Bilodeau and Jane McLaughlin.

Cupid's cutting quite a swath in the group we understand. An important announcement is forthcoming from Grace Maloney of Belmont and "Jiggs" Keleher of Woburn, while Ruth Walsh and Charlie Cauley are not to be outdone in this business of becoming Mr. and Mrs. . . . Ruth looked mighty attractive at last evening's party . . . white gardenias adding their fragrance to her black net costume.

Another gay group included Dorothy Grimes and Bud St. Pierre, who are always so interested in Dancers' Club parties . . . and Marion Grady and Dick Maguire . . . Dot's black taffeta was set off by a shoulder bouquet of gardenias and Marion's wine red bagheers was the last word in smartness . . . matching carnations and veil completing her ensemble.

GAY PARTY OF SIX

Marion and Edith McPeaks and Eleanor Kelly and their escorts comprised a happy party of six . . . Marion's print was banded with dark crepe . . . Edithpreferred lipstick chiffon while Eleanor chose blue lace tied with pink velvet.

Glimpsed Agnes McHugh and Billy Hogan . . . also Marguerite Maguire and Gen Connors . . . Agnes in changeable taffeta . . . and Marguerite looking pretty smooth in her sequin creation with matching tiara.

Marjorie Sullivan was quite holidayish-looking in her bright red moire while her brother, Gerard, escorted Eleanor Howard . . . a vivacious blonde who choose a puffed sleeved number of blue taffeta.

WEARS WHITE CREPE

Glimpsed Kay Fleming dancing about with Fabian O'Rourke . . . while Eleanor Sullivan was accompanied by Jimmie Sampson.

President of the alumnae . . . Mary Colwell . . . her white crepe combination with gold clips . . . entertained as her guest Katherine Monahan . . . whose dark taffeta had a cluster of red roses for a colorful touch.

Merry Foursome at Notre Dame Dance

THOMAS P. GLYNN LORETTA MULLIN BETTY CROSBY LEO GLYNN

THE COLLEGIATE CROWD turned out in good numbers for the alumnae supper dance of Boston Academy of Notre Dame last night at the Hotel Puritan. Thomas P. Glynn of Jamaica Plain escorted Loretta Mullin of Winchester to the dance while Betty Crosby of Jamaica Plain was squired by Leo Glynn. Both Betty and Loretta, prominent members of the graduate body, took active part in arranging the scholarship benefit.

Five week-end specials will leave North Station for various New Hampshire and Vermont winter sport centers. At the same time, there will be one-day "snow trains" leaving North Station on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, according to Harry F. McCarthy, passenger traffic manager.

Reports from the ski territory show snowfalls ranging from five to 15 inches and forecasts of further flurries.

New Year's Eve One of Gayest

By MANNY SHERMAN

Now that Santa Claus has departed it is time for the boys and girls to select their favorite night spot to usher in the New Year. Some of the grandest gifts Santa left behind in Boston were the excellent shows and entertainment for the night clubs of the city and its suburbs. So that the task of choosing a place to greet the New Year should not only be easy, but pleasant, too. The hotels, restaurants and clubs have spared nothing to make this New Year's Eve one long to be remembered, so let's cruise around the city and see what's in store.

You can always count on the Hotel Essex to do big things in a big way. This year, the Hotel Essex party will have four dance bands playing in four different rooms. Without question this is the biggest array of bands featured in a Boston hotel in many years. Even the most blase night-club goers always get a kick out of the Essex Scottish Bagpipers who serenade in the finest as a climax to the evening's entertainment. This unique group led by George Smith, famous for his bagpiping from coast to coast has become an Essex attraction.

At the Cocoanut Grove an entire new show will be presented in addition to a new line of Broadway beauties. The [illegible] Rathina Warner [illegible] Boston in her [illegible] and [illegible] dance.

Blame Mothers For '37 Speed Model Debs

Find Husbands Have Little to Say in Daughter Rule

By PAUL GALLICO

International News Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—Behind the streamlined speed model debutante of 1937, wacky or otherwise, or her quieter, more conservative sister, stand her parents, or rather her mother. A portrait of her and her male consort is necessary to an understanding of the girls who are making news of today.

If the girls are nitwits, useless, wasteful, irresponsible, as many of them are, it is only their parents who are to blame, with the mother taking a 90 per cent share. In nine cases out of ten the father doesn't count. He is as much dominated by the mother, his wife, as is the daughter.

There seems to be as much need for sociological and educational work amongst the parents of the rich as there is among the poor and ignorant.

MANY WOMAN-TRAINED

The most serious handicap of the modern debutante girl is that in so many cases she is the child of divorced parents. Her mother has remarried and her current stepfather has either no interest or is permitted to have no say in the upbringing of his step-daughter. Thus the girl is completely woman-trained or servant-trained. And the woman, in many cases, is an [illegible], or a social climber.

An attractive daughter is a valuable adjunct to social climbing.

A picture of the worst of these mothers of rich little girls would look something like this:

Her average age is between 38 and 45. She is usually a handsome woman who still demands the flattery and attention of men that she herself had as a debutante or if she married into the social world, then as a young girl.

If her husband is too busy to give her this attention she will get it elsewhere. Her morals are her own. They are not impeccable.

She is extravagant. She likes publicity.

THROWS BIG PARTIES

She either deliberately encourages her daughter into following her example or by neglecting her lets her run wild.

Her theories of education are ultra modern in that the girl is permitted her own way in everything and to make her own decisions.

She throws extravagant parties for her daughter but actually to enhance her own social prestige.

She takes little or no interest in the moral or ethical side of her daughter's life.

Her husband is too busy with his own life and business career or too dominated by his wife to exercise any control over his child, if it is a female.

He is told that she must have advantages and lets it go at that.

Inasmuch as half the time he does not know what his wife is up to he can hardly be expected to know much more about his daughter.

This, as has been suggested, is the worst side of the picture. On the other side of the ledger, there are as many and perhaps more girls of wealthy parents who are brought up as ladies and given every chance to become decent and intelligent human beings.

$30,000 Gold Hoard to Boys

1 of 2 Finders Dead As Title Is O. K.'d

BALTIMORE, Dec. 29 (AP).—Two boys who found caches of gold coins valued at $30,000 in a Baltimore cellar more than two years ago held a clear title to their finds today—but Ted Jones rejoiced alone.

His chum, Henry Grob, died several months ago while litigation over their second discovery was pending.

The boys unearthed the gold while hunting secret documents of the [illegible].

50-Year Mason Dies in New York

NEW YORK, Dec. 29—Charles Betts Hillhouse, 81, former produce merchant and descendant of an old New England family, is dead here.

Fire Perils Horses Of Mrs. Whitney

"Christmas Carol," wee baby abandoned and reclaimed by Mrs. Shirley Marcantonio, sleeps peacefully while a City Hospital nurse "inks" her feet to make those valuable identification impressions. She has her mama back again, by a ruling of a court judge.

And here they are, all four of them. The top impressions were taken of "Christmas Carol's" left and right foot when she was admitted to the hospital after she was found in a Roxbury hallway. The lower impressions were taken in preparation for discharge of the baby from the hospital in care of her mother.

Calls Decision On Baby 'Wise'

Declaring that women who abandon their babies are rarely the "criminal or vicious" type, Theodore A. Lothrop, secretary of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, today termed the decision of Judge [illegible] returning her child to Mrs. Shirley Marcantonio a wise one.

"Women who do this sort of thing are rarely vicious or of the criminal type. They are overpowered by circumstances and their own emotions," Lothrop said in discussing the case of the Dorchester mother who abandoned her child on a Roxbury doorstep, only to reclaim it again.

"This woman seems to have suffered sufficiently. I don't know the circumstances too intimately, but I read the newspapers and gathered the mother is apparently very repentant and has felt the pangs of remorse."

CALLS FOR PITY

[illegible]

"In few cases of abandonment are the mothers ever the calloused type," he said.

"They don't leave the child to die. Rather they rely upon the humanitarian instinct in people to care and watch over the infant.

"In the meantime, no doubt, they suffer the extreme tortures of their conscience."

Motors Layoff Adds To Michigan Job Crisis

DETROIT, Dec. 29 (INS).—A harassed state government prepared [illegible] unemployment problem [illegible] acute yesterday by the announcement that [illegible] workers in [illegible] Motors Corporation Michigan plants will be laid off Monday.

"We will meet relief needs of Michigan," said Governor Frank Murphy, who added, "I have an ace in the hole for February if things get worse."

He did not explain his "ace."

State Relief Administrator George F. Granger declared more welfare funds must be appropriated to meet the emergency. He pointed out that the welfare department is operating on a budget approved last June when industrial employment figures were soaring and the ration approved headed [illegible].

Granger said money to meet the added relief costs must come from some other source than the present [illegible].

The announcement of the General Motors layoffs was made by GM President William S. Knudsen at a press conference. Knudsen [illegible] the car [illegible] in which GM will slash production 45 per cent and put all American division plants on a three-day week.

The GM layoffs will follow employment cuts in the entire automotive industry, cuts which have left thousands of automobile workers idle at the season in which they normally have the most work.

Second Westboro Crash Victim Dies

FRAMINGHAM, Dec. 29—Joseph Luckey, [illegible], of Concord street, Ashland, died in Framingham Union Hospital today, second victim of a crash in Westboro December 19.

Luckey was thought to be on the road to recovery after two blood transfusions but took a turn for the worse late last night. Cyprien Cormier, 43, also of Ashland, died just after the accident.

Truckmen Agree To Hold Parley

Following an [illegible] conference [illegible] the state board of conciliation and arbitration today, representatives of 5000 truck drivers in the Boston area agreed to meet representatives of the master truckmen later in an attempt to settle differences.

Union officials were adamant in their refusal to consider a $4 decrease in wages which the employers plan to put into effect. The employes seek an increase in wages.

The employers desire to change the present 44-hour week, with time and a half pay for overtime, to a 48-hour week within a range of 54 hours.

Union representatives will meet tomorrow at 7 p. m. in Franklin Union Hall. A strike vote will be conducted unless the situation is materially changed by then.

EDWIN C. HILL, noted writer and radio commentator, writes "Human Side of the News" every day in the Boston American.

Strikers Barred From State's Jobless Pay

Officials List 130,000 Eligible for Checks After Jan. 1

Massachusetts social security officials issued a sharp warning today that no unemployment compensation checks would be given to persons out of jobs because of strikes and labor disputes.

Nearly 130,000 persons will be eligible throughout the state for unemployment insurance after January 1, the officials estimated. All of these, however, must be definitely out of work and unable to obtain a job.

According to the law no person out on strike can obtain unemployment compensation.

It was pointed out, however, that persons who lost their jobs because of strike conditions in which they did not participate are eligible under the law for compensation.

SOME EXCLUDED

The officials also stated that while persons must accept suitable employment when available, there are certain types of employment not deemed suitable by the law.

In the first case, the employment is not suitable if the position offered is vacant due directly to a strike, lockout or labor dispute.

It is not suitable if the wages, hours or other conditions of the work offered are substantially lower or less favorable to the individual than those prevailing for similar work in the locality.

Finally, it is not suitable if acceptance of such work would require the individual to join a company union or would abridge or limit his right to join or retain membership in any bona fide labor organization or association of workmen.

ARMORIES USED

Officials pointed out that no checks could be mailed before February 1, according to the law.

The armories which will be used are the Irvington street, East Newton street, Charlestown and East Boston Armories, Laurence P. Harrington, executive secretary of the unemployment commission, announced.

The offices will open for the first time at 9 a. m. Monday morning. Each will have a staff of employes trained in the unemployment compensation law and procedure.

Gout Medicine To Bring New Hardy Plants

Scientists See First Step in Revolution Of Agriculture

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 29 (AP)—Onions, radishes and clover inoculated with an old human gout remedy, colchicine, and as swollen as if with gout, were shown to the American Association for the Advancement of Science here today as the next great revolution in agriculture.

They are the first useful agricultural plants to be treated with the gout medicine, which less than six months ago was discovered to be a miracle maker in plants.

PLANTS ON EXHIBIT

They are sick plants, but from their seed, if the miracle works as it has with the weeds previously tried, will come new kinds of onions, radishes and clover, all hardier and larger than their species has ever been.

The plants were exhibited by the Carnegie Institution of Washington. The exhibit was in charge of Dr. Albert F. Blakeslee, who a month ago announced to the scientific world the miracles which colchicine had done with Jimson weeds at Cold Springs Harbor, N. Y. It made the weeds sick and swollen. But from their seed came new hardy plants.

LETTERS RECEIVED

Colchicine, used for gout and lumbago, is a yellow crystalline powder extracted from the autumn crocus. There is [illegible].

But the Carnegie scientists have been getting letters from people who have heard of the potency on plants.

Childless women write that they hear that stuff "makes things grow" and want it to give them babies. People ask for it to make various parts of their bodies grow larger. Short persons ask if it will make them tall and bald men if it will grow hair.

The case was one of 50 sent to the city law department by Moynihan for prosecution for the alleged fraudulent obtaining of relief.

MONITOR and MERRIMAC Set No. 13—Human Problem No. 75

Union hopes of winning the Civil War seemed shattered when Confederates constructed a new type of fighting ship, the ironclad Merrimac.

Apparently impervious to cannon fire, the Merrimac attacked a Union fleet near Newport News, Va.

Two Union warships were destroyed, a third was left helpless. President Lincoln called a cabinet meeting.

But next morning the Merrimac faced a tiny but potent foe, the Monitor, first armored vessel built by the U. S. Navy. What happened made history.

One of the two conclusions given below was taken from the original story (see Rules). Select the one you consider correct.

A. The Monitor saved the Union fleet by driving off the Merrimac.

B. The Monitor was sunk by the Merrimac.

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

I wonder why seagulls fly higher in summer and lower in winter. I would address this query to Mr. Thornton Burgess, author of "Old Mother West Wind" stories, if I knew where to find him. I remember the stories which I used to read to Daughter by the hour back in the days before she could read "Orchids on Your Budget" and other books calculated to give her more advanced ideas. But "Old Mother West Wind," as I remember her, had to do with Jimmy Skunk and Peter Rabbit and Johnny Chuck and Brer Possum and the other inhabitants of the Green Forest and the Smiling Pool and other suburban spots. I don't remember Mr. Burgess ever writing about seagulls. After a[illegible] as an author he is no James B. Connolly.

Robert E. Rogers

Perch Low to Earth

But to revert to the seagulls. In the summer they fly high, wide and handsome. But I have been watching those identical gulls—or their children or grand children—from my study window overlooking the sea for at least the past hour and they seem to be sticking close to terra firma. I mean they are roosting on the rocks close in shore and their infrequent flights are low, slow and difficult. I do not know, not being an ornithologist, but I suspect that the upper air even under the bright December sunshine is pretty cold and that even the water, cold as it looks, is warmer and that the rocks are in comparison positively torrid. I don't know, you understand. I'm just guessing.

These days (up to Tuesday) are positively halcyon. I hesitate to say how wrong the weather man has been for the past week prophesying snow and rain and such—because by the time this appears in print I shall probably be wearing my goloshes and my knee high laced boots. But the sea has been calm and sunny down here, no wind to speak of, a pleasant tang in the air but only a tang and as nice Christmas week weather as you want to see. The ancient Greeks used to link up the tragic tale of Halcyon with this kind of weather.

When Sea Seems Best

Those were the days, they fabled, when the Aegean sea was so quiet, the winds so still and the air so mild, that Halcyon turned by the gods into a swallow could float in her nest on the waters without harm. And that is what the weather is like today, as I look out of my study window straight east to Spain.

I wonder why they never put the ocean on Christmas cards. The pictures always show valleys and hills snow-clad and forests hoary with snow dripping from great branches and little village streets and cottages and churches and more cottages, and ancestral Tudor halls and the like, all buried in snow.

Good Enough for Card

But snow looks as well on Bearskin Neck as on the most mediaeval landscape and handsomer too outlined against the blue of the Atlantic. And an angry surf breaking on my rocks, half seen in a wind-swept flurry of snowflakes is as handsome as anything Waugh does for his annual marine at the Carnegie Institute and would be just as handsome a Christmas card. But apparently there is a tradition about these things and the sea at Christmastide is out.

The only ships we see at the Nativity season are the ships of the desert lurching over the sands with the Wise Men.

Do you remember Rudyard Kipling's poem about the end of the world "when there was no more sea," and the fisher folk and the sailors complained bitterly at having to pluck forever with tarry thumbs at golden harps.

"Our thumbs are rough and tarred and the tune is somewhat hard
"Let us lift a deepsea chant such as seamen lift at sea."
Then stooped the Lord and gathered the good sea to Him
And 'stablished its borders to all eternity,
That those who have no pleasure to serve the Lord by measure
May enter into galleons and serve Him on the sea

And what goes for the Last Judgment, say I, might as well go, too, on a Christmas card. Now that I intend to start a Movement about it!

Plan Life in Hawaii

Last night in St. Andrew's Church, Wellesley, Miss Helen Adams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Sherman Adams, became the wife of Stanley Walsh of Kahului, Maui, Hawaii. After completing his studies at Babson Institute, the couple will make their home in Hawaii. They were pohtographed a few minutes after the Rev. Philemon Sturgis married them and they were on their way to a reception at the Wellesley Country Club.

Arrested Man 8 Times for $20 In Taxes

Marlboro Collector Quizzed on Charging $61.97 Fees

Morris Youman of Brighton, a Marlboro deputy tax collector, today testified under cross-examination at the State House that he charged a $25-a-week Navy Yard employe eight arrest fees although he only went there once.

Youman was one of several deputy tax collectors charged in special proceedings before Tax Commissioner Henry F. Long with misconduct in connection with the collection of taxes.

He testified he arrested Harold Vlass eight times, simultaneously, on warrants charging him with nonpayment of poll, old age assistance and excise taxes for 1936 [illegible]

The actual taxes were $20 and Youman testified that Vlass has [illegible] paid him $41.97 [illegible] was $[illegible]

Under direct examination by his attorney, A. T. Hamther, Youman testified he was a [illegible] for two years, had served 120 warrants and that his fee for each was $[illegible]

Under cross-examination by Attorney Maurice M. Goldman, Youman stated he had [illegible] offered the deputyship by a tax collector.

"Did you finally release him (Vlass) from custody?" Goldman asked.

"Yes, after he told me he could pay."

Q—Did you tell him he might have the privilege of putting up a bond? A—No.

Q—How long did it take to arrest him and have him in custody eight different times? A—About 20 minutes.

The Kalypso Vergotti arrived via Philadelphia and Norfolk last night with seven [illegible] of the crew, Evangelos among them, under guard.

GUARDS ELUDED

Immigration authorities at Philadelphia had learned somehow, that Evangelos and his companions shipped aboard the freighter solely to "jump ship" and enter the United States illegally the first chance they got.

When the freighter arrived here the steamship agency, which faces a fine of $1000 apiece for every illegal entry permitted, placed five private guards aboard and Evangelos and the six suspected companions were forbidden shore leave.

Nevertheless, early today Evangelos and [illegible] Meilliaressis likewise [illegible] the guards, ran to the ship's side and jumped from the ship to the pier.

Evangelos landed awkwardly, fell stunned. When the pursuing guards reached his side they found his ankle was broken.

ONE GETS AWAY

He was taken to Chelsea Marine Hospital—under guard.

Meilliaressis got away. For a little while at least he's won his heart's desire and is in the United States.

The five remaining suspected members of the crew were taken off the ship and are being held at the Immigration Station at East Boston. They will be kept there until the ship sails, immigration authorities taking no further chances.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Ann Marsters

IN THE MORNING MAIL:—A reader, who signs himself A. G., of Cambridge, tells us about a news item which states that American musicians are studying the possibility of introducing music in factories to speed up production. And that European factories are already using records to keep the workers stepping right along.

ANN MARSTERS

"Just think of the possibilities," says A. G. "They could play 'Pennies From Heaven' at the mint, 'It's June in January' at the furnace works, 'Carry Me Back to Old Virginny' at the stretcher factory.

It would be fine to make phonograph records to the tune of 'The Music Goes Round and Round.' And, of course, 'Anchors Aweigh' would be quite the thing at the shipyards.

"And how would you like to hear 'East Side, West Side' roaring out at a map factory?

We'll let the rest of you readers go on from there—and perhaps you can develop a new parlor game.

Winter's Beauty of Today Will Be Tomorrow's Slush

I for one am very sorry that it stopped snowing so soon yesterday. It started out beautifully—and it was a dandy kind of snow. Just the right kind for making snowballs.

It would have been a fine chance for the children to try out the new skates and mittens and sleds and skis which Santa Claus brought. When you stop to think of it, doesn't it seem that real snowstorms aren't nearly as frequent as they were when you used to wear a string around your neck with your mittens attached?

And do you remember the bubbling excitement of waking up to find the sky white with snowflakes?

But there are compensations for grown-up Bostonians, for surely one of the loveliest sights in the world is Copley square during a snowstorm.

Aid to Feminine Allure: Then There's the Other Kind

Most women love perfume (expensive perfume)—but few realize what goes into the making of fine perfume or why it should be so expensive.

We've recently learned that to create one beautiful perfume, practically the entire world is combed for precious materials. Musk is obtained from Tibet, sandalwood from Japan, ambergris from India, roses from Bulgaria, jasmine from the south of France.

The best perfume is a miracle of chemistry, blending and knowledge of the world's resources. And it does not come into being in a short time.

It often takes years of patient work to achieve just the proper harmony.

They say that European women think of perfume as one of the subtlest of the feminine arts—whereas American women have no true appreciation of it. (But no doubt, when we use it, we get the same effect.)

WHAT EVERYBODY THINKS

Strangely enough, I am not
The kind of a person I seem,
For deep inside I have got
A secret, beautiful dream

I muse upon what's the use
Of being genius or saint—
Oh the paintings I could produce
If I could only paint!

And so I must shake your hands
And hide each burning thought,
For the world only understands
The kind of a person I'm not.

WOMEN PLAN TO WITNESS ARRIVAL

CHAPTER 491

LILLIAN did not give either Harry or Dicky a chance to protest as she said we were getting the "bum's rush" in being sent upstairs before the arrival of my father's twin brother.

Both her husband and mine said something in humorously apologetic tones, but Lillian was talking so volubly—purposely I knew—as she grabbed me by the arm, and rushed me to [illegible] the library so that I [illegible] hear nothing of what [illegible]

[illegible] heard them was [illegible] which [illegible] progress across the [illegible] as the door [illegible] her she evidently [illegible] Webster Underwood [illegible] Graham [illegible] probably are Katie [illegible] more convinced of that fact upon other occasions than I am tonight."

"You hear vot dey said shoost now?" Katie queried hopefully.

LILLIAN IS ANGRY

"No," Lillian answered laconically.

"You vant me tell you?" she queried tentatively.

[illegible]

We [illegible] gas would call a [illegible] upon the impending arrival of my father's twin brother. She had "snapped out of it" in her own [illegible] at the moment she had remorsefully kissed her husband, but it evidently had returned to her.

I knew her well enough to be sure that she would be very remorseful, and very much ashamed of herself later on, for she prides herself upon being a "good soldier" in every situation confronting her, but just now there was nothing to be done save to humor her—by ignoring her and letting her do and say what she would until her [illegible] vanished.

She turned as she reached the top of the stairs and put her finger to her lips, which held a twisted gamin grin.

"If you want a front seat at this par[illegible] I know where there is one," she said.

BALCONY SUGGESTED

Katie giggled again nervously that time and I knew that she was as surprised and puzzled as I was at Lillian's mood. But I resolved to play up to my old friend.

"I'll wager I know what you mean," I whispered with one eye upon my mother-in-law's door. "You mean the little side balcony that overlooks the kitchen door."

"Exactly," she whispered back as gleefully as might a child. "If we crouch down behind that balcony before midnight, we shall see the whole proceeding without being seen. I wouldn't miss it for two farms. And besides—"

She broke off, but I guessed what was in her mind. From that vantage point we would know at once if anything happened to change our plans instead of having to wait until the news was brought to us.

YOU CAN BE BEAUTIFUL

Flowers in the Air

EVEN though you might swing a mean golf club and spend most of your waking hours in tweeds . . . though you talk horses and squash and Chesapeake Bug-Eyes . . . you still must underline your femininity by the constant use of some new "eau florales," the subtlest distillations of unusual flowers, to fit your softest or your most exuberant moods at any time of the day or the night! Loretta Young suggests the "sweat pea" flacon with her satin and chiffon negligee.

Even Rare Magnolia Fragrance Caught by 'Eaux Florales'

By ARLINE GOULD

IF IT'S FLOWER scents that turn you dreamy-eyed, you can't do better than the new "Magnolia" fragrance in a group of "eaux florales" . . . the flower that's been immortalized by unnumbered love stories of the most romantic deep South.

It's the newest way of surrounding yourself with subtle fragrance this "eau florale." Created by a French perfumer out of flowers which are usually too difficult to interpret well, the essence is entrusted to a light, sparkling liquid that's put up in big crystal flacons with a plastic cover which may be replaced by a clever atomizer.

* * *

Stronger than a cologne, lighter than perfume, this [illegible] the body [illegible] And for hours on end the subtle breath of flowers floats [illegible]

The success of the "eaux florales" has been sensational. And if you haven't let them work their sorcery for you, it's a pity!

One of the hardest odors in the world to capture is that of fresh sweet peas. It's so evanescent, so mysteriously sweet. But you'll need no assurance from the label on the flacon to know the spirit of the loveliest mauve blossoms has been caught. On the carton, by the way, is an old-fashioned color print of the flower expressed.

Verbena is fresh as a Cape Cod breeze over salt marshes and dunes. For you who like to point up the night-time hours devoted to your lush perfume with an outdoor scent when you wear pebble-cotton stockings and straight-hung tweeds in [illegible] Gardenia is [illegible] If it's your favorite, you'll ad[illegible] version. But the magnolia has been the cause of much excitement. It's so thoroughly refreshing and exquisite . . . like old lace with moonlight on it, and budding magnolias outside long glass doors.

For all further details on the new eaux florales (about a dollar a bottle) the exquisite new way of surrounding yourself with the fragrance of unusual flowers, phone Arline Gould, Liberty 4000, week days until five, or write her at the Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ban on High Heels Is Good Beauty Slogan

"DOWN with high heels" is a good beauty slogan. Some women have accepted it and have taken to heels that give support to the arch of the foot and balance to the body. They find life's roadway easier to travel. Their dispositions improve. Nervous systems are stabilized.

Others hang onto high heels as an old cat hangs on to her kittens. They don't walk, they clump. Ankles thicken because of the side to side movement of the leg hinge which is not a normal movement at all. There is a strain on the tendons of the foot, the toes bear the weight of the body. In time they rebel, are unsightly with corns and callused spots.

The lady of fashion who has a high cultivated [illegible] wears high heels on the street, though she may use them for the evening festivities. She likes to give her poor [illegible] a holiday [illegible] and then, so she wears low heels in the house. She realizes that re[illegible] feet [illegible] the physical mechanism, and when that happens the feminine face isn't a beauty bargain. Twinges in the toes make frowns between the eyes.

When women dress their feet according to hygienic principles many beauty ills will evaporate.

Daily Exercise

DEEP breathing exercises should be taken daily by the woman who is flat chested. They not only increase the lung capacity, strengthen the fibers of the upper portion of the torso but make the blood streams dance.

Stand erect, hands on hips, inhale slowly while you throw the head far back, exhale as you send it forward.

Help Prevent Smallpox

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D

I AM writing this article in charming Florida where we are enjoying a brief vacation.

Could I confer upon all North Americans a special grant of health, there would be a cold weather vacation for every citizen of the snow and ice country.

In Florida or California or some other state between them there [illegible] get great doses of sunshine with its healing rays.

[illegible] in this glorious clime we hear about unpleasant things. In one of the papers I just read this:

"Although there has not been a case of smallpox in Florida for years and none in Tampa for more than a decade, City Health Officer McEachern issued a warning yesterday that the disease is riding southward . . . and said he already has started to vaccinate Tampa's 20,000 school children . . . 'We have not had smallpox in Tampa since 1926. As a result few children born since then have been vaccinated and many vaccinated during the 1926 epidemic are no longer immune. This is generally true throughout the state.'"

OTHER STATES, TOO

Yes Doctor, and unfortunately it is generally true throughout all the states and in Canada, too. Your advice is sensible, indeed. I pray your campaign may result in universal vaccination in Tampa. I pray your example may be followed by health officials and private physicians everywhere. There is not one whit more danger in Tampa, or Florida, than in another city, state or province. But there is a sure way to be safe and that is to vaccinate.

The other day my young daughter-in-law dropped in to say: "Your granddaughter, aged eight months, was vaccinated today."

"Fine," was my reply, "but why did you wait so long?"

Generally speaking, the infant should be vaccinated at five or six months.

Mother's First Duty Belongs to Children

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A vast responsibility comes with the birth of a child, and every real mother knows it. Never again is she absolutely free to live her own life. Always must she consider the safety and well-being of her son or daughter.

Perhaps, it is the appreciation of this responsibility that is causing Mrs. L. to hesitate about doing the foolish thing she contemplates. At least I hope it is.

But, before commenting further on her problem, I am going to let you read her letter, just as she writes it. She says:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Almost from the beginning of our marriage, I have never been able to break through the shell my husband has built around himself.

Because of his consistent selfishness and cruelty, I no longer feel any love for him, and many is the time I've wanted to leave him. We have lovely children, and supposedly lead an ideal married life.

Some time ago my husband's cousin and I discovered we love each other. Maybe this should make us feel like a couple of rats or something, but it doesn't.

Our relationship has been entirely innocent, so we have nothing to be ashamed of, and we hate hypocrisy.

Financially, a divorce is impossible for me, and I hate being the wife of one man when I love another. We want each other honorably; that is why we have not gone away together.

We feel it would not be fair to the children or to anyone concerned.

MRS. L.

DEAR FRIEND:

Since the home and happiness of your children are concerned, your honorable and above-board stand is to be applauded.

No conscientious woman, such as you undoubtedly are, would think of breaking up the home in which her children are growing up until everything else has failed.

Perhaps one reason you have never been able to break through the shell in which your husband has taken refuge is that you are in love with some one else and he senses that something is wrong.

I hope you will weigh carefully every step you take, in the time that must elapse between the present and your divorce, if you decide on getting one, which, for the children's sake, I hope you may consider prayerfully.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

MEN WOMEN LOVE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Some time ago my attention was attracted to a letter in your column from a girl who signed herself "Mary." Her husband was unemployed, his family had given him a car, and he was going high, wide and handsome.

I wonder at the type of men some women waste themselves on. Another girl named Mary preferred [illegible] type of man in preference to me.

He lied about my ability to provide for her, though I was earning [illegible] comfortable income.

He was unemployed, and has continued to remain unemployed, with the result that the girl has to go out and work and provide for them both.

Love is certainly a wonderful thing when it inspires a woman with enough pluck to support a lazy man.

EXPERIENCE.

DEAR SON:

If we always stopped to think why anyone does anything, particularly where love is concerned, the crossword puzzle would go out of existence, and life would be a continual riddle-marathon.

We just have to keep on and feel sorry for the Marys who get raw deals in the shape of husbands.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Stealing A Trick

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

There is a certain type of play that goes unappreciated in average circles.

I refer to the "stealing" of a trick as a necessary preliminary to a general plan of play.

The hand below, taken from the recent Vanderbilt Tournament, created quite a swing in a team-of-four match.

South, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

North:
♠ K J 3 2
♡ A 8 6 4
◇ K 7 3
♣ 9 8

West:
♠ A Q 7 6
♡ J
◇ A J 8
♣ Q 10 6 3 2

East:
♠ 8 4
♡ 9 7 5 3 2
◇ Q 6
♣ J 7 5 4

South:
♠ 10 9 5
♡ K Q 10
◇ 10 9 5 4 2
♣ A K

At one table the bidding went:

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡
Pass	1 N T	Dbl.	Redbl.
2 ♣	Pass	Pass	2 ♠
Pass	3 ♡	Pass	Pass
Pass

Obviously, South did not think enough of his hand to venture three notrump. North finally went down one trick, for a hundred point defeat.

It should be noted that at this table West started out by "trapping"; he felt there was more chance of penalizing the opponents than making a game of his own.

At the other table the bidding proceeded:

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ◇	1 ♠	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
Pass	2 N T	Pass	3 N T
Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened his fourth best club. Declarer, counting his probable tricks, saw that even if the Ace and Queen of spades were on side, West would be able to stop the suit twice and, thus declarer would be confined to two spades, a maximum of four hearts, and two clubs; he would never be able to establish a diamond because West's club suit would by that time be cleared. There was only one hope and that was to steal a diamond trick, thus retaining tempo, and then to go out after the spades.

On this keen reasoning declarer led a low diamond toward the King. West could have squashed the offensive by putting up his Ace, but how was West to know that his partner (East) had the Queen? From West's point of view, to put up the Ace might be fatal—it might give declarer four diamond tricks and these, with club and heart tricks, might make it unnecessary for declarer to clear the spade suit.

West cannot be censured for ducking the diamond. Dummy's King won, and declarer returned to his hand with the heart King, to lead the spade ten. West put up his Ace, and cleared his club suit with another lead.

Declarer now cashed the Queen and ten of hearts, then led the nine of spades. West, rather than give up his covering, played low. This, however, merely resulted in an extra trick. Declarer needed the spade finesse for his ninth trick and, therefore, let the nine ride.

When it held another spade and [illegible] finesse gave the hand declarer [illegible] of ten tricks, and a highly satisfactory point score.

A New Year's Gift To America

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Response to the question recently asked Young America—"IF YOU WERE SANTA CLAUS, WHAT GIFT WOULD YOU BRING THIS NATION?"—has been amazing and brilliant. Here are more of these remarkable answers:

"Youth is cold hearted." . . . "Youth, knowing nothing of suffering, is callous to pain."

How often you've heard these criticisms—perhaps made them yourself? And yet, in the thousands of replies which came in answer to our question, the one gift often mentioned by these husky, healthy youngsters was—HEALTH!

Youth is NOT heartless! It sees and cringes in agonized pity before the spectacle of pain. The Christ-child's own tenderness lies in these letters we print today.

From 21-year-old RUSSELL DEMPSEY HOLMES, of NEW YORK CITY, comes this unusual and most blessed gift:

"A CITY OF THEIR OWN FOR TUBERCULOSIS VICTIMS, WHERE THEY CAN WORK AND PLAY, LIVE, LOVE AND HOPE, WITHOUT JEOPARDIZING OTHERS, OR THEIR OWN HEALTH.

"A place where those who were not entirely helpless could support their families and themselves, and not depend on charity. This city would have industrial plants and programs especially adapted to the needs of the tubercular, with rest periods and milk provided.

"There would be government-built homes with low rents.

"Give them pleasure and pride, and proper work and a decent position socially, and the depression, which is the most deadly accompaniment of tuberculosis, would soon be wiped out."

That's truly the "spirit of Christmas" son!

Scores of pleas came for "SOCIALIZED MEDICINE" as a New Year's gift for America. Today come various concrete suggestions, such as this one from GILBERT MUELLER of CHICAGO, Ill., who'd give every city in the country "IRON LUNGS . . . ARTIFICIAL RESPIRATORS."

"I'd give these," says he, "in sufficient number to serve every American, however poor or remote. I would place these iron lungs in care of the community leaders, to be municipally cared for, as we now care for our fire-fighting apparatus . . . to be preserved and cherished.

"And my joy would be full when the various mayors, presidents and civic managers pledged themselves to continually add more respirators as needed—so that no child ever need suffer or perish for lack of this heaven-sent instrument in our battle against infantile paralysis!"

What a gift that would be to broken-hearted mothers and fathers and pitiful, strangling little ones!

Then, from a young wife, [illegible] PAINLESS CHILDBIRTH FOR ALL MOTHERS. S[illegible] would be the gift to this nation of HARRIET SWAYZE, of ALLENTOWN, PA., if she were Santa Claus.

"Modern science," says she, "has several methods for relieving the agony most women suffer, yet only a comparatively few benefit by their knowledge. How wonderful it would be if every mother could be placed in that lovely, relaxed, semi-conscious state, and awake—not exhausted, but fresh and buoyant—to find her baby born.

"If I had my way, every American mother would be placed in the hands of a competent, thoroughly trained and sympathetic doctor long before her baby was to come. And such doctors should be available everywhere, for even the poorest and most isolated."

And a million mothers will rise and call you blessed for that, my dear.

Those New Coiffures

IT'S no good splitting hairs on the subject of the new coiffures. Some girls are for them, some are "agin" them, and they're both right. Those sleek surfaces and rolls and the exaggerated uplift suit certain types. They won't do for the ones who tag along at the end of the fashion parade.

Despite all the "whimsies" of hair[illegible] dressers who sponsor designs that are sometimes hard to wear, most of the movie stars are still showing tresses that are [illegible]

One style is so outmoded it is an eyesore, and that is the short cut that displays straight locks at the back. You know, a little flounce of them that the wave doesn't cover. It is the direful truth that back hair, so terribly important, never gets the attention that is given to the front and sides. Observe the audience in the theater. It is discouraging. A triple mirror should be a part of the beauty equipment of every woman. Look [illegible] thee little one.

EDGY DISPOSITION SIGN OF WRONG DIET

By IDA JEAN KAIN

WHEN you lose your sweet disposition on a reducing diet, take it as a warning. You are not getting your minerals and vitamins when your nerves snarl up and you want to snap at people.

Sooner or later such an inadequate diet will have its effect on your health.

Your disposition is a fairly accurate gauge of your well-being. The battle to stay slim should not affect your disposition, and any program that makes you cantankerous is dangerous. The balanced diet safeguards your health and your disposition.

In the balanced menu the important minerals, vitamins and protein are supplied in normal amounts so that although your weight is lowered, there are no ill effects. There should never be any reduction in these food essentials. The calorie cut is restricted to sugars and starches.

• • •

You will notice that in the daily menu the protein content forms a considerable portion of the calorie intake. You need adequate protein daily for the repair of body tissue and this element has the happy faculty for the reducer of stimulating the metabolism to a slightly higher calorie utilization.

TOTAL CALORIES FOR DAY	1145

You should have a large serving of lean meat, fish or fowl once a day, or a small serving twice a day. You also need one egg or a serving of cottage cheese, which supplies protein and calcium.

Whether or not you believe it the reducer needs milk. Take one pint of skimmed or buttermilk. The milk may be in liquid form or combined with other food.

• • •

Use whole grain breads for vitamin B. It has been found that whole grain bread supplies about 15 times as much of this vitamin as white bread.

Fresh fruits have a very important place in the reducer's diet. Have two fresh fruits daily, one a citrous fruit or tomato juice for vitamin C. Avoid the fruits high in calories, such as raisins, figs, prunes, dates, avocados, etc.

You must have your vegetables. The rule is two or more cooked vegetables. You may also, if your calorie allowance permits, have one potato daily. Potatoes are not nearly as fattening as reputed and they are filling and high in alkaline salts. If on a strict diet, avoid the high calorie vegetables: peas, canned corn, sweet potatoes, navy beans.

All raw vegetables may be used in liberal quantities. They are bulky, low in calories and high in minerals.

• • •

On menus that follow these food principles you will find reducing easy on the disposition, and the valid reason is that you are not putting a strain on your vitality. You can have all the food you need while reducing—all the food you need to keep well and cheerful.

The "Protective Diet Chart" will help you to plan your own balanced reducing menus. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for this chart.

Fashion Suggestions

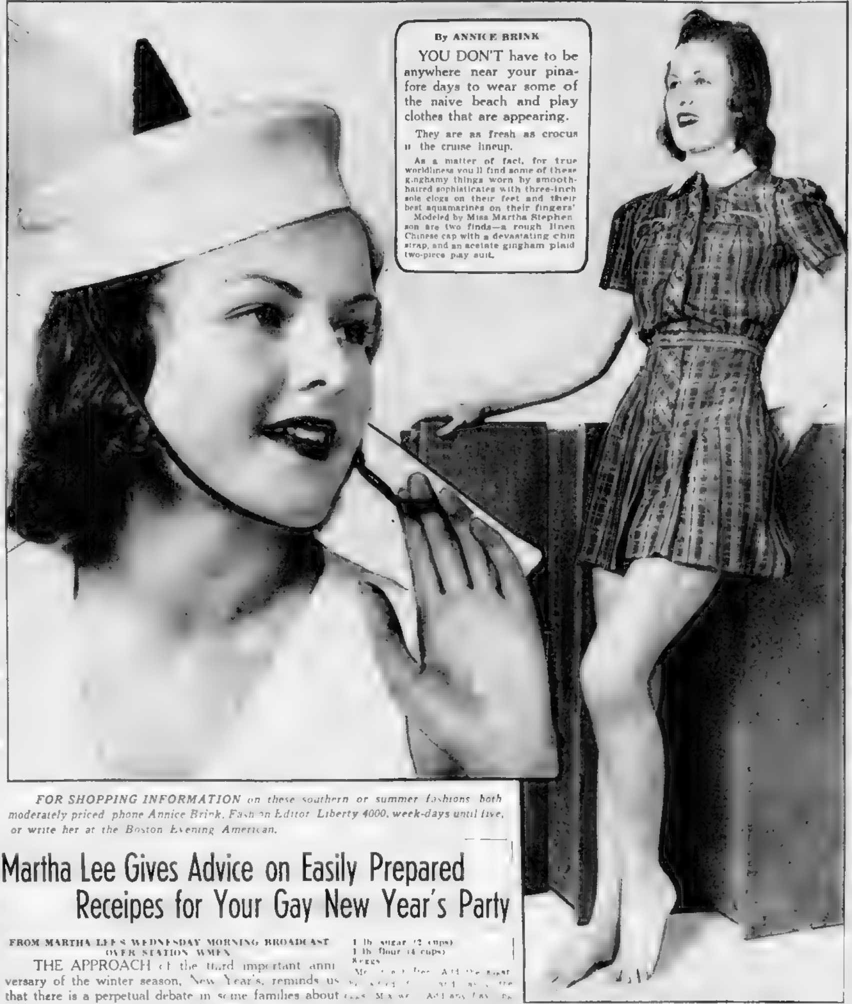
SHOES have wider toes now, but don't let that fact influence you to wear a shorter shoe. If the toes are forced to the end of the shoe, you may find that corns have developed at the toe ends; sometimes they burrow down under the nail and become extremely painful.

• • •

IN the perfectly proportioned figure the measurement of the hips should extend by two inches. The waist should be trim and round, not necessarily small. The tummy should be flat as the palm of one's hand. It will be if a woman exercises daily, pays heed to good posture and keeps the backbone extended its full length when sitting, walking or standing.

The high bust is favored by Madame Fashion. Deep breathing will promote this condition. Cold baths and alcohol rubs are helpful.

Play Clothes Have Charm of Pinafore Days



By ANNICE BRINK

YOU DON'T have to be anywhere near your pinafore days to wear some of the naive beach and play clothes that are appearing.

They are as fresh as crocus in the cruise lineup.

As a matter of fact, for true worldliness you'll find some of these ginghamy things worn by smooth-haired sophisticates with three-inch sole clogs on their feet and their best aquamarines on their fingers!

Modeled by Miss Martha Stephenson are two finds—a rough linen Chinese cap with a devastating chin strap, and an acetate gingham plaid two-piece play suit.

Martha Lee Gives Advice on Easily Prepared Receipes for Your Gay New Year's Party

FROM MARTHA LEE'S WEDNESDAY MORNING BROADCAST OVER STATION WMEX

THE APPROACH of the third important anniversary of the winter season, New Year's, reminds us that there is a perpetual debate in some families about "going out" for the holiday celebration.

There is much to be said on both sides of the "going out" problem, the main argument for the affirmative being that [illegible] ing elsewhere gives the busy mother a treat.

Of course we [illegible] at a restaurant or hotel [illegible] to gatherings in other [illegible].

Personally we [illegible] the New Year opens with more [illegible] when it is started at home. [illegible] brate and the [illegible] keynote for the entire [illegible] a New Year's Eve or New Year's dinner has far more [illegible] family and friends [illegible] party in the smartest [illegible].

New Year's Day [illegible] growing in popularity [illegible] a hospitable way of [illegible] friends and [illegible]. We not see a [illegible] for [illegible] tertaining as informal [illegible] be. If you can make the party appear effortless [illegible] be happier.

• • •

MOTHERS are too apt to assume the entire burden of marketing, planning, preparing and serving rather than giving each member of the family some practical assignment to simplify arrangements for the celebration.

Here is a point where this country can take [illegible] other lands or perhaps from our own rural districts, where neighbors and children gather to pop and string corn, [illegible] cakes, peel fruit for pies and make many kinds of special holiday sweets.

It is a real inspiration to serve the first course of a holiday dinner in the living room, especially when the hostess must be cook and waitress. Then everything else, except dessert, can be on the table when the guests are seated.

• • •

GIVE YOUR guests a choice of tomato, or pineapple juice, or try pineapple and loganberry juice, mixed half and half, or cranberry juice cocktail. The living room service may include tiny broiled sausages speared with toothpicks, crisp crackers, celery stalks, slivers of raw, crisp carrot and assorted olives.

Ever combine fruit and vegetable juices in before-dinner cocktails? Squeeze out the juices with a heavy extractor and try any of these healthful combinations: Three-[illegible]

FILL [illegible] a few sprigs [illegible]

Speaking of appetizers, here is a refreshing tidbit that food advertisers will enjoy testing.

TARTLET SURPRISE

Prepare in advance tiny tart shells which may be reshaped [illegible]. Or buy a packaged bread. This quantity will fill eight to ten such shells.

2 packages cream cheese
½ cup finely-chopped walnuts
1 teaspoon worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon mayonnaise
10 anchovies
1 small bottle stuffed olives

Add the finely-chopped nuts to the cheese and whip smooth with the mayonnaise and worcestershire sauce. If desired, add a few drops of onion juice. Spread some of the mixture in the bottom of each tart shell, criss-cross two anchovies over the top and dash paprika lightly on spaces between. Cut the stuffed olives into thin rings for garnish, putting one in the center and the others around the edge of each tartlet.

Radish roses, parsley, or watercress may be used for garnish. Keep in a cool place until ready to serve.

NEW YEAR CAKES

This timely and unusual recipe originated in Belgium. The cookies keep well and are delicious served with tea. Try them for your New Year's tea.

Beauty Hints

LADY Lucky, who has money in [illegible] has [illegible] keeping [illegible] with [illegible] at night and that's all there is [illegible].

For the woman who takes care of the children, runs the home, does a lot of washing and scrubbing, the hands are a problem, especially in cold weather. The skin chaps, she discovers hangnails and sometimes flesh breaks at the finger ends. An invitation to a bridge party doesn't give her a thrill. She wants to sit on her hands and hide them, poor dear.

A few weeks of care will restore them to a good condition. She must experiment with household soaps to find one that is bland and [illegible]. She must wear rubber gloves for rough work, no matter how much she hates them. Cotton ones will serve when she dusts closet shelves or polishes the furniture.

Twice a day use a hand lotion. A semi-solid milky preparation serves the purpose very well and disappears in a few minutes. But hands need more than that. At least twice a week they should be lubricated. Coconut oil is a desirable medium, so is toilet lanoline.

IN Paris they are gilding their eyelashes. Well, let 'em. Eye fringes that give expression to the eyes and add to the depth of coloring should be dark. The darker the better.

Before putting on mascara oil the little winkers. They like that, thrive, grow long and abundant. You can use mineral oil or vaseline. Olive oil doesn't take hold as well. Dip an eyelash brush in water, pass it over the mascara, let the lashes rest on the finger tip, apply the pigment lightly.

Make Accessories For Your Home

A charming gift for someone you like very much at any time of the year—this little table decked out gaily in blue paint and silver stars. No one will guess that you made it yourself out of egg boxes.

You need only four boxes to make the table shown in our sketch. Put them together according to either diagram.

After you've sandpapered them fasten the boxes snugly together by nailing [illegible] strips of wood from box to box. Then put on a round top of three-ply wood, apply a coat of flat white paint, and next a quick drying enamel.

For another inexpensive artistic gift, choose lacquered gourds. They're all the rage these days and you can easily fix up a stunning bowl by drying a few gourds, seed pods and pine cones, and lacquering them in brilliant reds, blues and yellows.

As for that little girl who's so good right now, just before her birthday, wouldn't she love to have the Colonial doll house in the sketch? With a simple plan and instructions, you can make it in no time out of wallboard.

'ENVOY EXTRAORDINARY'

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

CHAPTER 29

"That syringe could have had nothing whatever to do with the one I purchased," Elisabeth asserted. A queer little silence followed. It became obvious that she did not intend to speak further.

"Very well," Marlow went on at last. "You bought a box containing a hypodermic syringe and some needles that afternoon of the same make as the one discovered by the dead man, and you will not tell us for whom you purchased them."

"You will forgive my reminding you," he continued, "that in some circumstances you may be compelled to answer so vital a question. I will pass on, however. Have you any poison in your room such as might be injected into a body with a syringe?"

QUESTIONED ABOUT MAYO

"I do not possess any poison of any sort," she declared.

"One more question I must trouble you with," Marlow [illegible] speaking this time more in his [illegible] manner. "Have you any idea where that syringe which you bought in Norwich is now?"

"None whatever."

"Had you any acquaintance with Major Fergus?"

"None."

"You did not know that he was coming down here with important governmental papers for Lord Matresser?"

"I certainly did not, nor had I any idea," Elisabeth went on emphatically, "that Lord Matresser was expecting anything of the sort or that he was a person likely to receive governmental papers."

Marlow [illegible] a few feet.

"Sorry to have been such a nuisance," he said. "Nothing more to ask you, Miss Stamier. If I could have just a word with you, Lord Matresser."

"I may finish my game of squash, then," Elisabeth asked, also rising.

"By all means," the young man answered.

[illegible] the door and [illegible] a moment on [illegible]

"I hope you do not think," Marlow [illegible] that I was in any way unnecessarily insistent with those questions?"

"Perhaps not," Matresser [illegible] "but at any rate you went quite far enough."

MARLOW EXPLAINS

"There was no need to go further," Marlow remarked drily. "Miss Stamier told me all that I or rather Finch, wishes to know."

"You would be a great deal wiser," Matresser said coldly, "and you would come a great deal nearer solving this mystery if you would put it out of your head that Miss Stamier could possibly have had anything to do with this affair. The purchase of a hypodermic syringe is an everyday affair."

"Nevertheless," Marlow persisted, "the fact that that syringe is found within a few feet of the person whose death we are here to investigate, naturally makes the purchase of some interest."

"I do not propose," Matresser said [illegible], "to discuss this matter with you, Marlow. It is the decision of Sir Francis Tring that no charge of murder must be brought against anyone unless the evidence has first been placed before him.

"Find the criminal by all means, but your particular business, Marlow, is to see that Scotland Yard does not overstep the mark. A blunder on their part would bring about serious complications.

"There are greater issues at stake than the lives or deaths of a dozen men even if they were all as good as Fergus."

[illegible]

"I am ranking myself on your side of course," [illegible] "but you must admit that it is a little difficult for Scotland Yard to stay their arm altogether when a brutal murder has been committed."

CAUTION NEEDED

"Well, difficult or not, it has to be done," Matresser said sternly, "and if you feel in the least doubt as to your instructions, you had better telephone once more to M17B before you make any false move which would mean the removal of two very able officers from the service.

"There is to be no arrest until Downing Street permits it, even if you get a confession."

Marlow [illegible] and [illegible] Yates [illegible] Once he moved towards the window and looked up at the sky [illegible] his shaggy head towards Matresser.

"Have you received word from London as to your destination, sir?" he asked.

Matresser smiled.

"For the first time in my life, little man," he replied, "I am not proposing to tell you. I shall be carrying the burden of a great many secrets. That big man down in the harbor, if he is here for the purpose I believe he is, would boil you alive to find them out."

"He wouldn't succeed."

"Boiling alive is an unpleasant death," Matresser observed.

"We have seen worse," Yates reminded him.

"One thing more," Matresser said emphatically.

The little man nodded.

"I can guess what it is."

"Don't let them bully Miss Stamier."

"It would be easier," Yates suggested, "if you were to get her to tell you why and for whom she bought that hypodermic syringe."

Once more the lights were flaming from behind every window of the Great House. Everyone crowded on to the terrace or on to the [illegible] a slowly descending plane.

"My dear—"

She drew him to one side.

"Lord Matresser," she begged, "you must do something for me."

"Well?"

"This plane is coming for you, of course. I suppose it means another of your wild expeditions."

"Not that I know of," he assured her.

She pointed to the pile of gun [illegible] magazines all standing near [illegible].

"What about those?"

Matresser [illegible] them [illegible].

"Well, there has been a shooting expedition talked of," he admitted. "I thought I had better get ready."

Radioland Reflections

By N. F. T.

SOLOING by Lawrence Tibbett looms as loud-speaker promise extraordinary (WEEI) while the Andre Kostelanetz half hour holds forth between 9 and 9:30 this evening.

With the noted tenor-baritone in the spotlight, Kostelanetz will be launching his new coast to coast network series of semi-classic and specially arranged popular music to be heard each Wednesday night hereafter when clocks strike nine.

"N. F. T."

After the breezy session during which he believes to have bested one Jack Benny, the fellow named Fred Allen makes ready to switch his regular radio place (WNAC) from 9 to 10 o'clock this evening back to where he can be a New Yorker again. Fred and his funmaking troupe will forsake Hollywood to again broadcast the Town Hall tonight [illegible] studios in the East beginning after this evening.

FLEETING FLASHES

Eddie Cantor and his radio company consisting of Pinky Tomlin, Jacques Renard, Jimmy Wallington, [illegible], Walter Schumann, glee club director, and Vic Knight, producer, will also journey to New York from Hollywood for personal appearances immediately following Cantor's program (WEEI) at 8:30 tonight.

The first program of the new series will be broadcast from New York.

During his New York stages of which there will be approximate[illegible] the youthful singing star [illegible] will [illegible] to be heard [illegible] of the [illegible] fun[illegible].

Two talented young women, each a star in her own field, will [illegible] for the [illegible] of the role of Madame Ernestine Schumann-Heink on Cavalcade of America [illegible] of the great prima donna to be heard (WEEI) this evening at 8 p. m.

Helen Olheim, American contralto of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will sing the role of the great prima donna. Miss Olheim's unusual vocal range enables her to sing as Schumann-Heink the young girl, the great diva at the height of her fame and as the older woman.

Jeanette Nolan, well known radio actress, has been brought East from her California home [illegible] of the Montana Rockies to [illegible] the [illegible] of Madame [illegible].

WILD AND WOOLLY

[illegible] Oklahoma outlaw was so ruthless that witnesses were afraid to testify against him and even fellow criminals lived in mortal fear of him [illegible] Phillips H. Lord's "Gang Busters" program (WEEI) tonight from 10 to 10:30 p. m.

Such was Bradshaw's evil reputation even among thieves that members of his own gang once [illegible] and left him for dead on a country road.

[illegible] Bradshaw lived to [illegible] a one-man reign of terror both for his followers and for the [illegible] citizens. His favorite amusements were shooting up small towns single-handed and was also robbing and sometimes murdering motorists on lonely roads.

* * *

The actress who plays the leading role in the new serial "Those We Love" will have to be the typical American girl. That is one of the casting requirements which the producers have set.

The part is that of 21-year-old Kathy Marshall who is soon expected to be one of radio's best known characters. The premiere of "Those We Love" is on Tuesday, January 4.

Because Paul Bryant, University of Alabama football star, is from Bob Burns' native Arkansas, members of the Alabama [illegible] team will witness the Music Hall broadcast two days before the [illegible] game.

Bryant telegraphed Burns as one Arkansan to another to ask if broadcast tickets were available. Bob wired Bryant to come up to the door, "tell them you're from Arkansas and that you've got a party of 14 with you."

Root Pressure Measured by Scientist

Force Is Developed By 'Breathing of Living Cells'

By G. B. LAL

International News Service Science Editor

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 29.—Discovery of tremendous pressure power in plant roots, enough to send the sap to the top of the tallest trees, was reported at the session here of the American Association for the Advancement of Science here.

Discovery of the roots' pressure force was made and told by Dr. Philip R. White of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, Princeton, N. J. He represented the roots as pumping up the [illegible] sap with a [illegible] power.

90 POUNDS TO INCH

Dr. White said:

"The secretion of sap from the roots is so enormous that an imposed pressure of 90 pounds to the square inch—enough to raise water 200 feet—did not affect the rate of secretion appreciably.

These roots appear quite capable of raising water to the tops of the tallest trees, such as the California redwoods. The rhythm of secretion is daily."

1937's Scrap Album: Thoughts While Picking One's Pockets

AUSTEN LAKE

THIS IS THAT VIRGINAL, FORWARD-LOOKING period of the year when I police my pockets of the note-paper rubbish accumulated through the last 12 months. Most of it, jotted originally as memoranda, is unintelligible now—unrelated scraps of marginalia pencilled on the backs of empty envelopes, food menus and time tables.

Here is a scrawl on a flap of magazine wrapper, reading, "Dr. fleb.-J. B.-OK." From such little pebbles columns are built. It was the Sunday before Champion Jimmy Braddock was hacked into a bloody, unconscious pulp by Joe Louis. A doctor named Meyer had visited his little training Eden on the shores of Lake Michigan and for an hour had thumped, twisted and wrenched Braddock's limbs. The plebitis which Jimmy had suffered so painfully the year before the—shrivelled arteries and veins which retarded circulation and collected poisonous impurities in the joints had gone. "He is Ogay," said the physician with a strong Germanic tinge. But history had showed that Braddock was not O. K.

[illegible] to New York [illegible] against President Ford Frick and [illegible] Governor Clinton H[illegible] with [illegible] threats and promising to run Frick out of baseball. "Overnight jump," did I say? It had started that way with a portable typewriter and a toothbrush and pair of pajamas under the lid. But successive office telegrams had turned it into a two weeks tour of the CIO strike-center in Michigan the arrival of Ben Chapman and Buck Newsom with the Red Sox in Detroit, the fight scene in Chicago—all with the typewriter, toothbrush and 'jamas.

Farewell, Hymn and Library Stub

A FRAGMENT OF A COMMODORE carte du jour has the smudged memo, "McK. 2 More Yrs.-Dough." That's easy. It was last October. An orchestra was playing soft fiddle music. Men in dinner coats, painted ladies, sport greats and sport tramps had flowed past the table where Bill McKechnie and I were sitting. And he had confessed that he was going to take the Cincinnati management because "I only want two more years of baseball and money is king. My family is growing up and I am growing old."

The corner of a Lily Dale, N. Y., Spiritualist program and a thumb-smudged notation that looks like the lines of a hymn. It must have been that August afternoon in the psychic city 40 miles south of Buffalo, when I visited the school for Spiritualist children. The smell of clover was in the air. Robins warbled rain calls and summer's bees droned dully as the children's trebel had piped a bright tune ending with, "An hour's . . . communyun' 'ith the dead." Their eyes had been quick with life

A library receipt stamped with the S.S. Carmania. Coming home from Ireland last April and we were plowing south through smooth seas while imagination raced around the headlands shouting distant memories. Out yonder where a dark smear edged the horizon lay Waterford Town and its cobbled quays. A little inland lay Mellory Abbey where the Monks were busy with Compline and the lilt of Cistertian chants. And gradually Ireland of the welcomes had sunk below the world's rim and there was nothing in sight but the dimpled swell of the sea and the watery road toward home.

Aerial Revery, Farr and Goshen

NOW THE LOST AIR MAIL BAGGAGE CHECK for which I had fumbled in the late evening hours of Oct. 30 when I had flown home from the Princeton-Harvard game. The memory of the incandescent pools of shimmering light as we had soared over the Boston suburbs in a velvet night. The strings of road lights like yellow beads and the rotating fingers of aerial beacons beckoning against the gloom.

An unused press ticket for the Holy Cross-B. C. game and recollections of Bill Osmanski's silvery britches flashing for his final touchdown in the late twilight of that mild November 27 . . . a calling card and the New York address of a Lafayette alumnus who tottered into the officials' quarters after the Pennsylvania-Georgetown game, breathing alcoholic fumes and talking intelligibly about Tim, Pete and an army of old collegiate ghosts.

The torn corner of a telegraph blank with the typed dateline, "Long Branch, N. J. Aug. 26." Tommy Farr and the vision of the Welsh fighter having his knuckles bandaged and snarling irritable answers to the press. His tawny hair, battered features and the blue light of spite in his eyes as he slipped on his training gloves and beat a brisk tattoo on the wooden partitions.

A cardboard badge for the Goshen race paddock and memories of the drowsy upstate New York hamlet where 40,000 strangers poured into a town built for 3000. The grandfatherly elms bending down in leafy benediction. Slick city smoothies mingling with shaggy farm yokels. Blue blood mamas with pig-tailed daughters who had tallyhoed from country estates Whiskery hay chasers with sun creases in their neecks—all come to worship in the harness horse heaven.

And so on and so on. Yesterday's trivia, phantoms reborn from the scrap paper rubbish of 1937. And who knows, a year hence there may be others, like, "Get 6 for Doc, Red Sox World Series," or, "Schmeling down from Louis left hook in 4th." Who knows?

Rindge-Belmont Game School Leader

Greater Boston Ice Rivals Clash at Garden

The Greater Boston Interscholastic Hockey League takes over the Boston Garden ice this afternoon as the entire eight entries go into action — the opening whistle [illegible] at 1 o'clock.

From the showing in the opening games of the league competition the four game program [illegible] plenty of thrills and fast skating with the competition keen.

In the initial game Rindge Tech which failed in its opener to live up to its pre-season promise faces off with the [illegible] Belmont high [illegible]

[illegible] Against Cambridge Latin the Ma[illegible] crew was not at full strength due to the illness of Al "Porky" Dimond probably the outstanding wing in the loop.

BELMONT IMPROVED

Dumond was among the leading [illegible] last season and in games [illegible] this season he [illegible] his real form [illegible] threw the Rindge [illegible] for a loss against [illegible] through [illegible]

[illegible]

THE GLYNN BOYS

Medford provides the family feature with a pair of hard checking defensemen in the Glynn brothers B[illegible] and Frank. The [illegible] cover the points for the Mystics star goalie Johnnie Mee who captured a [illegible] honors last season in the nets.

In the third game Cambridge Latin should chalk up its first win of the season with Newton high offering the opposition.

When the Cantabs polish their passing attack they will become one of the classiest teams in the league with Capt. Mort B[illegible] leading the attack.

Coach Evan Johnson's Newton team looked impressive in its win over Belmont and should be greatly improved for this game. Ben Mas[illegible] work on the defense played an important part in [illegible]

A thrilling engagement between the Arlington and Melrose sextets will terminate the afternoon puck chasing. Regarded as a weak outfit Arlington exhibited a fairly strong attack against Stoneham although its victory edge was but one goal.

In Larry Rabine and Captain Billy [illegible] Coach Charlie Downs has a fine pair of forwards.

FEEL TURNER'S LOSS

One of Coach Downs' biggest surprises has been the excellent play [illegible] Jack Carney.

The Arlington mentor looked upon the cage department as one of the weak spots on the team but now prospects are much brighter. Carney played his first varsity game against Stoneham and turned in a remarkable performance.

Melrose, a "powerhouse" in early forecasts, has failed to live up to expectations.

Part of their failure to deliver can be attributed to the loss of Leo Turner, veteran first line center a few days before the first game.

Team	W.	L.	T.	Pts.
Newton	1	0	0	2
Arlington	1	0	0	2
Medford	1	0	0	2
Rindge	0	0	1	1
Cambridge Latin	0	0	1	1

Final Scrimmage

FORT WORTH, Tex., Dec. 29 (INS)—One last hard scrimmage session today and a shaping-up drill tomorrow remain on the University of Colorado's Fort Worth schedule as they get ready for the Cotton Bowl game New Year's Day.

'WE WUZ ROBBED!'

Sneak Thief Goes Through Pockets Of Disgruntled Rangers

The Rangers were a disgruntled crew when they pulled out of the South Station for New York.

They had lost to the Bruins, before a capacity crowd of 10,000 rabid fans, on a freak goal by Bill Hollett, late in the final period.

Upon returning to their dressing room, they were boiling over the assault on Phil Watson by Eddie Shore and also on their second straight defeat.

"Butch" Keeling was the first Ranger player in "civies." When he arrived at the Garden, Butch had a five dollar bill in his pocket. When he took a peek into his pocketbook after the game, he was clean.

Then Lynn Patrick discovered he'd been nicked for his lone two dollars.

About that time, all of the Rangers were fishing their pockets.

Mack Colville had had eight dollars. The petty thief left him three, but the thief was not so thoughtful in the case of Alex Shibicky who, like Keeling, went for his last "finif."

The Rangers lost the hockey game, and four of their members were taken for a total of $17 by some thief, who sneaked into the dressing room, probably while Phil Watson was receiving first aid treatment.

Casey, Saunooke Meet at Garden

George and Marshall in Other Half Of Double Windup—Bowser Aims To Clear Title Muddle

[illegible] Paul Bowser will usher in the New Year's [illegible] double windup featuring four of the game's [illegible] heavyweights at Boston Garden on Friday night, January 7.

After he had signed Ed Don George [illegible] and today a [illegible] and Everett Marshall [illegible] as world's champion. [illegible] Bowser decided on a [illegible]

"I want to open the year with the most pretentious program I have ever staged," Bowser said.

"Besides the double-windup between four standout stars of the game, I plan a program fairly studded with big names of the wrestling world."

Steve "Crusher" Casey whom many experts regard as the world's greatest heavyweight will be in the other half of the twin windup and the Sweeny County Kerry giant will be called upon to take his toughest assignment [illegible]

Bowser has paired him with [illegible] the Cherokee Indian.

OUTCLASSED TOR

There are fans who figure Saunooke is too big and powerful for Casey and is likely to break the Irishman's brilliant winning streak.

On the other hand, there are those who class Casey as being the strongest wrestler in the world today, and the one man who can beat the huge Indian.

A comparison of their respective records in Boston gives the Indian a slight edge. He needed but five [illegible] Tor Johnson, whereas Casey found the Swedish man mountain a much [illegible] nearly 30 minutes to dispose of him.

Except for Casey and Saunooke Johnson proved too big and powerful for all other opponents he met since establishing headquarters in New England a year ago.

Both Saunooke and Casey have brilliant records. The Indian came to Boston a good many months ago and has beaten everybody Bowser has asked him to go against.

What is more, the Indian believes in his ability to the extent of never quibbling over opponents when Bowser gives him matches.

GEORGE ON WAY UP

Casey came to Boston from Ireland a year ago last October. He has beaten more than 100 topnotch matmen and none has so much as held him to a draw. Before coming to America, the Crusher won more than 200 battles in Europe. He has never been beaten in his entire career.

Bruins Burned By Rangers' Holding

Referee Fails to Call Penalties, So B's Cut Loose

By BILL GRIMES

Unless there is an immediate and marked improvement in the officiating of Bruin games at the Boston Garden, hockey will soon be on the down grade.

It was poor officiating on the parts of Clarence Campbell and Arthur M[illegible] that was responsible for [illegible] of the [illegible] that [illegible] last night when the Bruins and [illegible] Rangers [illegible]

Watson complained of dizziness but otherwise had no bad effects from the [illegible] up to the time he departed for New York.

Although no fair minded person can condone with Eddie Shore, the real cause of the trouble can be traced to the officials.

The Rangers are noted for holding. They have been getting away with that type of play for years. They now have it down almost to a science.

[illegible] is not [illegible] in the line of [illegible] so aggravating as holding. The Rangers started to hold early in the first period.

In fact Red Hextall was [illegible] around Cooney Weiland when the first Bruin goal was scored. And the freak score by Bill Hollett which gave the Rossmen the decision [illegible] in the final period was [illegible] Heller hanging [illegible] the [illegible] with both arms.

The officials [illegible] the Rangers [illegible] it was but natural that the Bruins when they discovered they were not going to receive any protection from the referees did the next best thing.

Strange as it may seem to those who know the Rangers style of play, Alex Shibicky was the only New Yorker sent off for holding.

As further proof of his incompetency, Campbell according to Lester Patrick stated that Watson was given a major penalty because he provoked Shore.

Ruth Weckbacher Loses Mixed Doubles Pin Title to Janette Killgren

Ruth Weckbacher five-time champion in as many candlepin events for women, was knocked from the throne in one of the classes the mixed doubles by the [illegible] bowling of Janette Killgren paired with Jack Fitzgerald, when the [illegible] came through with [illegible] in the championship [illegible] now in progress at the Commonwealth alleys.

They were well rewarded for in his 10 strings he got after the pins for a pinfall of 1116, placing him at the top of all competitors in this class, and dropping James DeLong back to second place with 1081.

H. Bergstrom, paired with R. Enemark, was not too hot in the men's doubles, but at that got enough pins to give his duo the lead in the event. Their combined score was 919, eight pins in front of [illegible] and R. Walsh.

It is expected the won will fly tonight when the crack teams from New England get into action.

Joe C[illegible] of the Eagle alleys is sending [illegible] teams to represent him and is counting that some one of them will show quality and [illegible] to carry off the tournament and championship honors.

Roy Green is also due to tackle the men's singles today in defense of his title won at the last tournament of the New England Bowling Association.

Connecticut Girl Asks Lift to Derby

Ida Scudiery Hopes To Become Great Figure Skater

Little Hope Taylor of Providence is by many months the youngest boy or girl to enter the 1938 Silver Skates Derby.

Hope is n[illegible] through her ninth winter, but she'll be in the thick of the title contention when the girls' fields gets underway in the third annual derby to be sponsored by the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser at Boston Garden on the afternoon of Sunday, January 23.

The Rhode Island miss writes us a bit of newsy information about herself.

"I am a fancy skater and will be 10 years old in February.

"I have a friend who probably will be in the Silver Skates Derby. Her name is Edith Barlow, a fancy skater of Providence and the Skating Club of Boston.

"I am not quite so good as Edith, but I hope to make a very good showing."

IDA ONLY 13

From the tone of her letter we know Hope will acquit herself nobly. She's got the spirit of the Silver Skates right in her.

Another similar missile is at hand and again it comes from an out[illegible]

Ida Sc[illegible] is the writer. She's only 13, and she too has an [illegible] toward becoming a great figure skater as well as a speed champ[illegible]

Perhaps some of the other Silver Skater can help Ida out of her dilemma. She has no way of coming to Boston. There may be persons [illegible] who could pick her up.

Her letter follows:

"I would like very much to be in your Silver Skates Derby but I live in Manchester, Conn., and I don't know how I would get to Boston.

"I just got a pair of white figure skates for Christmas. I'm 13 years old and am trying very much to become a figure skater as well as a speed skater.

"I can do some things Sonja Henie can do, but I can't do them so gracefully. But I do love skating.

"I made myself a skating costume, too. I'll wear it to the Silver Skates if I can get down there. Most all the children think I'm a swell skater but I don't think so. My address is 83 Birch street, Manchester, Conn.

"I'm closing now, wondering how I'm going to get to Boston."

ALL WELCOME

Let's hope someone hears Ida's plea. We'd love to have her in the Derby.

Letters like the two printed today make all the effort of conducting the Silver Skates well worth while.

When we're doing things for youngsters like this we feel we're accomplishing a real good giving them a healthy outlet and [illegible] conditions [illegible] make them real grownups in the years to come.

Entries continue to mount. They're coming thick and fast. But keep them coming. All are welcome, man or woman, boy or girl, from anywhere in New England, regardless of age or experience.

Again remember our motto: "The more the merrier."

Old Timers Frown On Harmony Deals

By JOE CASHMAN

What worth harmony in the ranks of a ball club?

The modern manager answers that nothing could be more valuable; that having a happy family is more important than having a flock of .300 hitters and a surplus of mound aces.

And he practices what he preaches.

JOE CASHMAN

With the possible exception of Jimmy Dykes of the White Sox there isn't a big league pilot now who wouldn't exchange a malcontent or rule breaker of brilliant ability, for a good-natured, well behaved player [illegible]

The Brooklyn bosses realize that Van Lingle Mungo is one of the better pitchers but they'd gladly give him up in a fair swap to get rid of the headaches he causes them. The same is true of the Cardinals as regards Dizzy Dean.

At the same time, he admits he never knew of a club which so reeked with dissension.

"Fights among ourselves were [illegible] the club house but also on the bench.

"Jennings couldn't stop these but he could and did instill in all his charges such a desire for victory on the field that we won pennants under wraps.

"And I must say that since that experience, I've never been greatly concerned over reported friction in the ranks of a ball club.

"Until I'm convinced otherwise, I'll go along believing that the ill disposition of a ball player will never handicap either himself or his mates on the field if the manager has done a capable job of instilling the will to win in his charges."

And coming a few years closer [illegible] there were the [illegible] Yankee pennant machines moulded by little Miller Huggins.

They certainly made "Hug" gray and wizened far beyond his years, those carousing fellows as they threw him off trains [illegible] after rule.

"Might not present-day managers be better off if they sacrificed a little peace and harmony and tried to cash in on the baseball ability of a few garrulous guys who dislike to follow the straight and narrow path?" we asked Collins.

"I wouldn't want to express my opinion as to that," was the reply.

"Well, would you say," we persisted, "that it would profit a manager if he spent less time striving for peace and harmony and devoted more effort toward installing a burning desire for victory in his diamond family?

"In other words, couldn't he create in the ranks a will to win so strong that he wouldn't have to worry about how his players got along with one another or with him?"

Loud and emphatic was the one word answer:

"Positively."

Madden Sisters Title Threats

Cissy, 14, Reaches Quarter Finals At Longwood

By WALTER KILEY

The Madden sisters of Jamaica Plain, Baba and Cissy, are cutting a wide swath through the ranks of the national girls' indoor tennis championship field at Longwood Covered Courts.

Both are in the thick of the title running as the tourney reaches the quarter final singles stage today.

Cissy is only 14 years old. She won't be 15 until next spring.

Yet she's a veteran of girls' play, has improved tremendously in the past two years, and is the most serious threat to Defending Champion Helen Bernhard of New York City.

Cissy is small. She's been [illegible] in the bargain. But she's beginning to lengthen out, is losing the toy [illegible] appearance, and her game is speeding up correspondingly.

Baba is 17 and has been playing the game for several years. Today she meets Polly Morrill of Dedham in an important quarter-final.

Polly is considered the favorite. But whichever of the two wins faces a stiff assignment tomorrow. For lurking is Miss Bernhard as a semi-finals rival, and the New Yorker is red hot at the moment.

Baba meets Winchester's Dorothy Bruno in a lower half quarter-final.

Cissy, on form, is expected to beat Dorothy.

Both the Maddens turned to tennis at the insistence of their mother, the former Mercedes Johnson, herself a tennis player of better than average talents.

Mrs. Madden, wife of a prominent attorney, brought her daughters up in a tennis atmosphere. They almost haunt Longwood. For hours at a time over a stretch of years the mother hammered drives at the youngsters, coaching and encouraging them.

Baba was and still is intensely interested in skating. She has won several prizes in free skating in Skating Club of Boston competitions.

But as she improved on the courts

Miss Wightman is daughter of Mrs. Hazel Hotchkiss Wightman [illegible] a former champion who has won more national titles than any other man or woman in the history of American sports.

Miss Wightman then [illegible] and pairs with Miss Bernhard in defence of their national indoor doubles title.

They won the championship at Longwood a year ago and there seems to be no serious opposition to their continuance this season.

Today the Bernhard-Wightman team meets Ruth Carter and Jean Davis in a semifinal.

The Madden sisters play Enid White and Eleanor Trumbull in a quarterfinal, the winner then to meet Katharine Hubbell and Polly Morrill in a semifinal.

Rhode Island Plans For 1938 Racing | Opposes 61 Days At Suffolk Downs

By JACK CONWAY

RHODE ISLAND, speaking through the office of its Racing Commission, has gone on record as opposed to Massachusetts granting 61 days of racing to Suffolk Downs at this time.

M. Boston

The Rhode Island Racing Commission is of the opinion there will be racing at Narragansett Park next season. It believes there should be a round table discussion between Massachusetts, Rhode Island and New Hampshire before the racing schedule for New England is agreed upon.

Governor Francis Murphy of New Hampshire would like to sit in at a conference with Governor Charles F. Hurley of Massachusetts and Governor Robert E. Quinn of Rhode Island, and decide what would be the best racing program to adopt so that each New England track would get a fair allotment of dates.

The directors of Narragansett Park were to conduct another meeting today at which they hoped to make progress in untangling their affairs. Governor Quinn still insists there will not be any racing at Narragansett Park while Walter O'Hara is an officer of that organization. The directors of Narragansett Park asked for O'Hara's resignation as general manager a week ago, but O'Hara refused to give it to them. He says he was named general manager by the stockholders, and that his tenure of office does not expire until next June.

There is a report from Providence that there will be a special meeting of the stockholders of Narragansett Park the latter part of January to discuss the racing situation in Rhode Island.

Jansen Accepts Pin Challenge

Vic Billings Five, famous Webster bowling quintet, has their recent challenge hurled right back in their teeth.

Carl Jansen of 22 Oakdale street, Jamaica Plain, accepts the Billings challenge for a special 10 string candlepin match and says his Harris Hummers of the Jamaica Recreation alleys will take on the cocky Websterites for money, marbles or the State House.

"We call your bluff, Webster," says Jansen. "We're ready for action. It's up to you."

So-o-o, Webster.

Dodgers' Plight Cause of Worry To League

NEW YORK, Dec. 29 (AP) [illegible]

LEAGUE OFFICIALS WORRIED

"We can't deny we're worried about it," said one National League official. "Naturally we can't try to tell them their business or offer any kind of help, but we know that if something isn't done we're all going to lose. The Brooklyn fans have been loyal, but there must be a limit."

There is no clear indication yet what disposition the Dodgers will make of Van Lingle Mungo, the pitcher, or whether the warring owners even have given Manager Burleigh Grimes permission to make a deal. Some of the fellows came away from the secret Chicago meeting with the distinct impression that Grimes was handcuffed.

WALKER OFFER BONAFIDE

[illegible] Ebbets field last season had a bigger opening crowd than the Polo Grounds.

The most popular belief is though that Judge Steve McKeever, the octogenarian president, will stick right in there and continue his feud with the heirs of the late Charles Ebbets to the last breath. They've never agreed on anything yet and some folks declare they never will.

Meantime, the spring training schedules are only a week away and Burleigh Grimes, as if he didn't have enough troubles on his mind, has been forced to pay $385 rent on a Brooklyn flat he vacated because his lease expired. He made the tactical blunder of telling a Brooklyn jury he didn't like some vagrant odor in the neighborhood.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18 (INS)—Glenn Cunningham, the Kansas flier, and Gene Venzke, his perennial rival, will meet again in the invitation 800-meter run at the K. of C. games in Brooklyn a week from Saturday, it was announced today. Cunningham has won the event four years in a row.

A third starter will be Lou Burns, intercollegiate A. A. A. A. indoor mile champion.

Boxing in Need Of Miller Plan

One Pro Sport Which Neglects Poor And Indigent—'Gates Ajar Plan' Recommended for Penn

By BOB CONSIDINE

They used to laugh a little at the fellow when he'd come mumbling into a gymnasium and commence his double talk. He didn't mind it, because he couldn't pay attention very closely, anymore.

Sometimes, watching the fresh young fighters up in the training ring, he'd get very excited. The shakes would come on him again and he couldn't make his tongue say his words fast enough.

So the fellows in the white coats came and took him away. He was [illegible]. If the boxing fraternity saw the small notice in the papers [illegible]

That is the way of the ring game, the only major pro sport that doesn't systematically care for its bruised and its indigent.

Makes a boxer believe more and more in Maj. Henrie Miller's plan, presented recently to the National Boxing Association, which would strip a small portion out of each fight gate to care for the likes of men who serve as wheezing chopping blocks on which the weapons of [illegible] are honed.

Lovell Favored Over Barlund

NEW YORK, Dec. 29 (INS)—A flashback to the 1932 Olympic games at Los Angeles will be presented here tonight when Gunnar Barlund of Finland and Alberto Lovell of the Argentine meet in a 10-round heavyweight slugging duel.

On that previous occasion they engaged in the semi-finals of the Olympic boxing championships. Lovell beat Barlund and moved on from there to the title.

On the strength of the tall South American's recent record he has been tabbed as a 7 to 5 favorite to make it two in a row.

During his current American campaign, Lovell has won eight straight bouts while Barlund, after an auspicious and devastating start in this country, lost to Nathan Mann and Bob Olin.

The big Finn blamed his setbacks on a severe attack of influenza from which he says he had not completely recovered when he ran into the losses.

However, despite his rather unimpressive punching prowess, he is not generally rated with Lovell in a [illegible] case. In his most recent starts he scored over Eddie Cerette and Hans Haverlick, virtual unknowns.

The battle is significant because it perhaps will be the most important in the career of either fighter.

The winner is almost certain to move into a match early in the year with one of the leading contenders as a possible stepping stone to a title shot.

Among the spectators expected to be packed into the comparatively tiny Hippodrome for the fracas will be Tommy Farr, Welsh contender, who will begin training later in the week for his bout with Jim Braddock on January 21.

Farr's Bismanager [illegible] will be in the estate of a personal size-up of the two fighters for future reference—in the event he finds himself meeting the winner here or in California within the next few months.

Markle Retains Scoring Lead

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Dec. 29 (AP)—The rest of the International-American Hockey League spent the past week trying without success to catch up with its leading scorer, Jack Markle of the Syracuse Stars.

By chalking up three more points during the period Markle boosted his total to 21, which left him four points ahead of his nearest competitors, Chuck Shannon and Ed Convey, both also of the Stars.

In third place in the western division of the loop were Lorne Duguid and Peggy O'Neil, both of the Cleveland Barons, with 16 points.

Kilby McDonald of the Philadelphia Ramblers piled to the fore of the eastern branch skaters by jumping 18 points. Oscar Asmundsen of New Haven and Ed Wares of Philadelphia were runners-up in the East with 14 each and Lloyd Roche of Philadelphia followed with 13.

O'Neil shared first place on the penalty list for the first time this season. Tied with him at 16 infractions were Fred Robertson of Cleveland and Doran of Syracuse.

Anzac Crowd Cheers Budge

SYDNEY, Australia, Dec. 29 (AP)—Don Budge, American national tennis singles champion, redeemed himself today before 12,000 cheering fans by soundly whipping Jack Crawford of Australia, 7-5, 6-1, 6-1, in an exhibition match.

Budge's terrific service overwhelmed Crawford in the last two sets after Crawford's accuracy and lengthy placements gave him a good fight in the first.

The crowd's bitterness of Monday over Budge's acceptable display with Germany's Baron Gottfried von Cramm changed as the red-headed Californian fashed many aces passed the bewildered Australian.

Adrian Quist of Australia trounced Heinrich Henkel of Germany, 6-2, 6-4, 6-2, and Von Cramm defeated John Bromwich of Australia, 6-2, 7-5, 1-6.

Springfield Plays 12th Without Win

SPRINGFIELD, Dec. 29 (INS)—Pittsburgh Hornets and Springfield Indians of the International-American Hockey League played to a 2-2 overtime tie.

It was Springfield's 12th consecutive game without a victory.

LaFrance in 5:58 and Trudel in 16:35 tallied Springfield's second period goals.

Sorrell, scoring in 9:12 of the second period and 10:12 of the third period, made both Hornet markers.

Business Worried By News

Latest Developments Cast Shadows Upon Friendly Gestures

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Two Washington developments, both stemming from the same government agency, have caused business men more concern this week than anything that has been said or done by antagonistic political forces in many months. They are; first the threat of widespread anti-trust proceedings, second the abortive attempt to place the onus for the present decline in trade on big business.

Coming so closely on the heels of friendly administration gestures and statements by official spokesmen the situation should be ludicrous. Instead it is a deplorable development that comes when everyone is so earnestly hoping for a change for the better. It is almost too much to expect that the business and financial worlds will again be able to reassert themselves in courageous fashion after this latest blow. Rather does it seem almost necessary for some administration leader—and an important one—to clear the air with a straight forward statement of what is really intended. The only other hope at the moment is the incoming Congress. In it business may find a much needed friend that will aid it in a stern fight to restore some measure of prosperity.

THE COPPER SITUATION

Commodity students are currently devoting a good deal of their time and efforts to analysis of copper statistics. Since the red metal was one of the first to show weakness last spring it is but natural it should be watched for an early sign of a coming turn. As matters are at present domestic refined copper stocks are more than double the low level of April. However, they are not yet considered burdensome, especially if the current low rate of delivery shows a definite tendency to perk up. The foreign picture is somewhat better with stocks holding around recent low levels. Thus the world situation is not at all bad.

• • •

As for the immediate outlook the mere fact that purchases for domestic accounts are only running at about half the rate of deliveries indicates there is a possibility of further production curtailment. On the other hand foreign deliveries are well maintained and it does not seem to be too much to hope that prices abroad are in process of leveling off. At home actual curtailment should prove a strong influence in supporting prices close to recent low levels.

• • •

MARKET REVIEW

The present plight of stock prices is best understood by reviewing the action of the representative Dow-Jones averages since the establishment of the lows in late November. A rally set in during the final sessions of the month which carried the industrials back some 17 points, the rails about 4 points and the utilities approximately 3 points. Following this a normal technical slide took place which was followed by a to-be-expected rebound. Here the flaw in the market structure first showed. This rally topped out during the period December 18-24 UNDER PREVIOUS HIGHS. Inability to penetrate through that level was a danger signal, which was confirmed this week when all averages slipped through the lows set on or about December 14, the level from which the unsuccessful rally started.

• • •

There is little point in arguing with market action so clearly bad and we are not going to do so. Rather are we going to concern ourselves with the probable extent of this latest downturn. There is always the danger now that the averages have confirmed a new downswing that a major dip is in prospect. However, logic is not to be tossed out altogether and after the long slide that has already taken place we are inclined to the opinion that any new phase will hold to moderate proportions. In fact, it is quite possible that a false signal, as often happens, has been given and selling forces are indulging in final exhaustion.

Electric Power Production Off

NEW YORK, Dec. 29 (AP)—Electric power production in the United States in the week ended December 25 totalled 2,100,000,000 kilowatt hours, a decrease of 4.6 per cent under the 2,202,200,000 for the preceding week, the Edison Electric Institute estimated tentatively today.

The Christmas holiday held up power reports from various regions, and the 2,100,000,000 estimate, "based on such information as was available," is "subject to correction," the Institute said.

The December 25 week's decline from the preceding week was less than normally expected at this time, so the Associated Press electric power index, with 1929-30 taken as 100, advanced to 113.2, against 112.5 a week earlier and 118.8 a year ago. The index is adjusted for seasonal and long-term trend.

Heavy Industry Group Moves Up

Poor Showing Made By Motors

NEW YORK, Dec. 29—Renewed prospects of an enlarged naval building program sent aircraft, steel and other heavy industry shares ahead in today's stock market as other groups lagged.

Advances were modest in most instances and near the fourth hour prices in many cases had receded from the day's best levels. There were many losers scattered through the list.

Bethlehem Steel was a star performer, holding a gain of more than a point most of the time. Others ahead included U. S. Steel, Boeing, Douglas Aircraft, Westinghouse, General Electric, Anaconda, Kennecott, International Nickel, du Pont, J. I. Case, International Harvester, Johns-Manville, Santa Fe and Texas Corp.

MOTORS AT NEW LOW

Motors made a poor showing, with both Chrysler and General Motors touching new lows for the year. Also down were American Telephone, Dome Mines, Eastman Kodak, Union Pacific and Consolidated Edison.

Basic commodities were lower. Bonds rallied slightly after an early dip. Transatlantic issues were improved in foreign markets, but other shares tended down.

President Roosevelt's intimation at a press conference a bigger navy might be necessary provided stimulus for most of the buying that appeared. Brokers said selling came largely from investment rather than margin accounts.

Clouding the picture somewhat were reports from Washington the administration had determined to continue its campaign against its critics in business and finance. Wall Street understood the President would support some form of licensing bill for corporations.

Dampening enthusiasm for the motors was the statement of President Knudsen of General Motors that dealer inventories were high and that the supply of used cars was moving only slowly to consumers. The layoff of 30,000 men by that company, announced for January 1, was an unfavorable factor.

Secretary Roper's declaration income paid out in 1937 would show an increase of 10 per cent over 1936 was noted with interest, but appeared to have little effect on the buying and selling. He estimated foreign trade would show a substantial gain from last year.

CURRENT TOPICS

Analysts had before them for study during the session several of the usual midweek indices of business and industry.

Electric power production for the week ending Christmas Day, the Edison Electric Institute reported declined less than was normally expected for this holiday period. Railroads reporting November net operating income, however, showed a sharp drop under 1936.

"Iron Age," pointing out that steel operations in the final week of the year were at less than 20 per cent of capacity, held out the hope that some improvement might be expected early in January, but added that further gains perhaps would be "slow and halting."

Montgomery Ward Has Larger Net

CHICAGO, Dec. 29 (AP)—Montgomery Ward and Co. reported net profit for the nine months' period ended October 31 totaled $15,287,874, after the tax on undistributed earnings, compared with $12,977,442 the corresponding 1936 period.

This was equivalent to $2.73 a common share compared with $2.61 a share on a smaller amount of stock outstanding a year ago.

Third quarter net profit after surtax totaled $6,238,230 compared with $5,875,580 the corresponding period last year.

Plumbing, Heating Sales Gain Seen

CHICAGO, Dec. 29 (AP)—Plumbing and heating sales are expected to increase 10 per cent next year, the Plumbing and Heating Industries Bureau announced today after a survey among manufacturers.

This would extend into the sixth year the uninterrupted recovery experienced by the plumbing industry. Sales in 1937, the bureau estimated, were about 15 per cent better than in 1936.

Despite increasing sales, the bureau said, prices of staple plumbing and heating products are still 10 per cent below the average for the last 12 years.

House Divided Against Itself Cannot Stand

By B. C. FORBES

The government and industry are still at loggerheads as to which brought about the current deplorable downswing in business and employment.

Several spokesmen for the administration, notably Assistant Attorney-General Jackson, have sought to place the blame solely on large business enterprises.

Many business leaders quite early this year confided to me that they were going to pull in their horns because of the administration's hostile attitude.

So, there you are!

The lamentable fact is that business has been going from bad to worse during the greater part of this year, that employment has been painfully curtailed.

ROOSEVELT TOOK CREDIT

President Roosevelt took all the credit for the previous recovery.

But he not only seeks to shift the blame for the recession on the employing classes, but proclaims that he is counting upon them to send the country on another forward march.

One thing which gravely alarmed responsible men of affairs was President Roosevelt's plan to clip the wings of the Supreme Court and to set up the chief executive as the dictatorial arm of our whole government.

This move was squelched by the force of American public opinion.

Since then Mr. Roosevelt has voiced not a few conciliatory words. But the tragic fact is that in responsible circles his fair words are discounted, that various men of affairs declare that, from their own personal contacts with the chief executive, they cannot depend upon him to live up to all his promises.

DISTURBING ELEMENT

A new disturbing element has developed.

Fear has been generated among executives of important corporations that the administration is bent upon launching another campaign to hound and pound them. Assistant Attorney General Jackson's statements have confirmed these fears.

Among other things, he declares "Monopoly and big business have thrown us off balance. This is the cause of our discontent and unsettled confidence."

The answer of "monopoly and big business" is that the administration caused them to lose confidence in it and to become fearful of the treatment which might be meted out to them.

It is a sad condition of affairs.

Meanwhile, millions of breadwinners are being either thrown out of employment or are having their work hours drastically curtailed.

A HOUSE DIVIDED

Has not the government set itself up as the big boss of the country? Has it not proclaimed its determination to regulate everybody and everything?

This being so, surely it should be held accountable for whatever happens.

"A house divided against itself cannot stand."

The fact is that neither the political party in power nor industry can by itself insure prosperity for the American people. Only teamwork can do that.

We have not had adequate teamwork.

Nor until we do have a maximum rather than a minimum of teamwork between these two vital factors, can the American people hope to enjoy the development of another forward movement by America to new heights of well-being, wealth, employment, prosperity.

"A house divided against itself cannot stand."

Scientific Test Tubes Used to View Dip

Savants Put Current Recession Under Microscope

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
International News Service Financial Writer

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Dec. 29 (INS)—At an annual parade of America's academic minds, held here under the auspices of the American Economic Association and 10 allied organizations, 1800 savants put the current economic recession under the microscope here yesterday.

Specifically, they placed the harassed security markets and banking institutions into the scientific test tubes, and observed how they operated.

James Harvey Rogers, Yale economist and former advisor to the U. S. Treasury, suggested an increased rearmament program as the best answer to the current business slump. Dr. Rogers said:

"Not only would the greatest purchases be made from the heavy industries suffering most in the current slump, but the resulting output would not compete with any private business."

SPRAGUE'S SUGGESTION

Another Treasury advisor, O. M. W. Sprague, Harvard economist and former consultant of the Bank of England, suggested moves to increase the demand for heavy durable capital goods. He proposed concerted efforts to reduce the price of steel, cement and other building material, and advocated concurrent downward revision of wage rates in the building trades.

If an observer may be privileged to translate the highbrow discussions here into the language of the market place, it can be chronicled that learned men today especially sought the causes of the prevailing financial drouth which has resulted in a spectacular decline in the yield of the current crop of suckers in Wall Street.

An opportunity to have eavesdropped this afternoon at the session of the American Statistical Society at Haddon Hall would have given brokers in New York, Chicago, San Francisco and elsewhere the answer to some of the puzzling current questions about the meaning of current basic changes in their own affairs.

Two participants who got down to brass tacks were H. J. Loman, professor of insurance at the University of Pennsylvania, and Jules I. Bogen, professor of finance at New York University and editor of the New York Journal of Commerce.

Both asked in effect why the quality of hope which is supposed to spring eternal in the human breast was nowadays failing to bring hordes of customers to the Wall Street financial houses.

SECURITY ACT IS FACTOR

Dr. Bogen declared that the enactment of the Securities Act of 1933 and other legislation had been partially responsible for the new condition, but he stressed other factors even more.

He referred especially to the deterrent effect on the buying appetite of present day investors of the following influences: The severity of the depression in the early thirties, the poor quality of many of the bond issues floated before that time, the difficulties suffered by the railroads and public utility industries in recent years, the spread of the fear of inflation due to monetary measures in Washington, and to the easy money policy, which pushed up quotations of gilt-edge bonds "unduly."

"Under these circumstances, the revival of a market for new bond issues of middle grade among individual investors, which featured the American capital market of the 20s, may be delayed for an indefinite period in the future.

"The present period in the evolution of American investment banking resembles in many respects that which followed the panic of 1873. In each case, an era of widespread popular distribution of securities has been followed by an epoch in which individual investors have been loath to absorb new security issues, so that the market for new flotations has been restricted largely to financial institutions."

Liverpool Cotton Trading Dull

LIVERPOOL, Dec 29 (INS)—Continued dullness and steadiness attended cotton trading here today. Total receipts were 28,000 bales, including 11,200 American.

At noon strict good middling in the spot market was quoted at 5.57d; good middling, 5.27d; strict middling, 5.02d; middling 4.77d; strict low middling, 4.52d; low middling, 4.02d; strict good ordinary, 3.52d, and good ordinary, 3.12d.

Futures steady at the opening showed signs of weakening towards noon. Jan. sold for 4.64d; March, 4.68d; May, 4.74d, and July, 4.78d.

Cuban Sugar Exports Gain

NEW YORK, Dec. 29 (AP)—Cuban exports of sugar for the year to December 25 totaled 2,549,648 long tons, raw value, an increase of about 3.3 per cent over 2,469,286 tons in the comparable 1936 period, according to Havana advices to Lamborn & Co., sugar brokers.

Eastern Mfg. To Reorganize

Files Under 77-B of Bankruptcy Act; Plan Within 30 Days

PORTLAND, Me., Dec. 29 (AP)—Reorganization under Section 77-B of the Federal Bankruptcy Act was sought in federal court by the Eastern Manufacturing Company, manufacturers of paper, paper pulp and spruce cellulose.

The company owns and operates two mills in South Brewer and Lincoln and owns another at Orono which is under lease to another company. It holds title to large tracts of timberland in Maine and Nova Scotia and owns capital stock of several subsidiaries, including Lincoln Pulpwood Co., Ltd., a Nova Scotia corporation.

Federal Judge John A. Peters approved the company's petition and continued the concern in temporary possession of the property, and claims and interests of creditors and stockholders were ordered filed by March 1, 1938.

Edward W. Graham, president, said the company planned to file with the court within 30 days a complete reorganization plan.

The petition set forth that the company's property and assets have an aggregate value more than sufficient to meet its obligations.

Liabilities included trade accounts and acceptances payable in the amount of $372,158.90; bank loans of $1,152,000 guaranteed by the company, and outstanding bonds in the net principal amount of $1,775,185 plus interest due and unpaid thereon in the amount of $554,494.16.

Haney Analyzes Speech of Jackson

Says Broadcast Revealed Plenty of "Smart" Stuff

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University.)
Special to Boston Evening American

NEW YORK, Dec. 29—Mr. Roosevelt's man Jackson was selected to broadcast the latest news as to the administration's attitude toward business. After his numerous attacks upon lawyers, it seems strange to find the President picking one for his fishing trips, and using him as a stooge for political broadcasts. The reason for the selection, no doubt, is Attorney Jackson's violent defense in the past of the President's attempts to pack the Supreme Court.

"SMART" STUFF

Be that as it may, we find in the broadcast plenty of the "smart" stuff which young attorneys sometimes use. For example, Attorney Jackson tries to mix us up by talking about "monopoly" and "big business" as if the two were the same.

It is impossible to tell which he means. In one breath he says "monopoly" has raised prices, and in the next he says that "big business" won't cooperate.

But big business is not necessarily monopolistic; and monopoly is not necessarily big.

Almost everybody I know of is opposed to monopoly. I have long argued that competition is the essence of free business. But many big businesses are not monopolies. We want a good deal of big business in order to get the efficiency and low costs that they are able to give.

ACTION URGED

And I would ask Attorney Jackson why he, as a representative of the government, has not been breaking up the monopolies he says exist? There is plenty of anti-trust law on the statute books. Istead of running around making political speeches and broadcasts, why doesn't he attend to his business?

Is the time coming in the country when a successful government attorney must have a pleasing radio personality?

Again, this counsel for the defense of the New Deal shows what the legal mind can do, when he argues (1) that there is no serious depression, and (2) that the Roosevelt policies did not cause it!

Why so much worry about a depression that does not exist?

If business conditions are not "difficult" now, where is the emergency that calls for such threats to business as he makes? Why waste the nation's time and money in broadcasting?

MAIN IDEA

My impression, however, is that really his main idea is that "we didn't do it!" Counsel for the defense of Mr. Roosevelt tries to establish an alibi.

He shouts, "Big Business did it—I mean monopoly!"

Then comes this absolutely and 100 per cent false statement:

"Big business said repeatedly that if the federal government would reduce its expenditures, business confidence would revive and as a result private industry would take up the slack."

That is not true, and I believe that Jackson knows it isn't true.

The truth is that the New Deal will have to balance its budget, give us sound money, play fair between employer and employe, remove discrimination in taxation and withdraw from business itself before confidence can return.

"Big business" has never said anything; nor have big business men ever said repeatedly what Attorney Jackson alleges.

MOSTLY POLITICS

This defense broadcast is mostly just politics. It is designed to stir up a new trouble, and thus enable the New Deal to "do something" different. (In the past, the administration has been actively fostering monopoly!)

The worst of it is that it shows conclusively that there is no consistency or truth in it. First it said, "We planned it that way." Then it says, "No, we didn't. Monopoly did it."

Gould Views G.M.'s Layoff Statement

Announcement of 30,000 Men to Be Dropped Is Only Part of Story

By LESLIE GOULD
International News Service Financial Writer

NEW YORK, Dec. 29—The pessimistic General Motors statement, which helped along the decline in the stock market, means that the first quarter of 1938 probably can be written in the same kind of ink as this period now closing.

At least that is the way General Motors feels about things, and that company is one of the nation's smartest merchandising organizations. Chrysler has made just about as drastic reductions, but with a minimum of publicity.

ONLY PART OF STORY

The General Motors announcement of 30,000 men to be laid off "on or about January 1" and the remaining 205,000 workers on a three-day week basis tells only part of the story.

In the spring—at the peak—G. M. had about 270,000 men on its payrolls and as recently as October 265,000. Now, it is only going to have 205,000. In simple arithmetic that means a reduction of about 65,000 since spring and 60,000 lay-offs since October.

The remaining 205,000 are only going to work three days a week, so in working hours this means an additional lay-off of 82,000 men, or in all, since the spring, 147,000 men. And that is a lot of men and a lot of purchasing power.

It means that 147,000 men cannot buy automobiles—new or used—pianos, shoe shines or what have you. They are going to have to be helped by relatives, or the government—and that, too, means less purchasing power.

What is taking place in General Motors is going on in other lines.

That is why the General Motors statement is so interesting. Its president—W. S. Knudsen—minces no words about the bad news. General Motors is laying off 30,000 workers on January 1.

In the old days, the practice was to whisper this sort of information. Nothing was ever said of lay-offs, but wide publicity was always given to any rehiring.

This news means that estimates of a 40 per cent rate for the steel industry may have to be revised downward for January. Motors are one of the main props of the steel business.

This department on Dec. 17 pointed out that "inventories are large, and in the case of the motor car industry abnormally so . . . The stocks of new cars are not only large, but the holdings of used cars are even larger . . . The used stocks present one of the major problems of the motor car industry.

Refrigerator Sales Increase

NEW YORK, Dec. 29 (AP)—World sales of household electric refrigerators produced by American manufacturers totaled 92,425 units in November against 78,065 in November, 1936, the National Electrical Manufacturers Association announced today.

Sales for the first 11 months of the year were 2,181,527 units against 1,941,539 in the like 1936 period.

New Financing Lowest Since Jan., 1935

WASHINGTON, Rec. 29 (AP)—New net financing during November dropped to the lowest point since January, 1935, a Securities and Exchange Commission compilation showed today.

Analysis of statements registered with the commission revealed a total of $38,159,000 of new securities was registered in statement becoming fully effective in November. This compared with $127,621,000 in October and $266,026,000 in November, 1936.

COMMON STOCK ISSUES

The commission report indicated that approximately $2,704,000 of common stock issues filed in November were registered for reserve against conversion of securities with convertible provisions, so that only $35,455,000 of securities were left available for issuance for cash or other considerations.

Slightly more than half the month's registrations, after deduction of securities reserved for conversion, was accounted for by $18,177,000 of issues of investment and trading companies, whose securities usually are disposed of only during an extended offering period.

OTHER COMPANIES

Other financial companies, such as commercial credit, mortgage, industrial and personal loan companies, registered $5,752,000 of securities, and manufacturing companies $6,123,000.

Common stock issues, other than those registered for reserve against conversion amounted to 57.5 per cent of total registrations, and preferred stock issues to 17.3 per cent.

Certificates of participation beneficial interest and warrants totaled 21.3 per cent, while interest-bearing securities amounted to only 3.9 per cent of the month's total.

National Income To Be Smaller In 1938

Although there are reasons for believing that the definite beginning of a prolonged depression will be postponed beyond 1938, there is little question that for the year as a whole, there will be contraction in the amount of inflation in 1938 as compared with that prevailing in 1937, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. The question of immediate interest, therefore, concerns the probable extent of this contraction of inflation and the effect of this contraction on business activity.

The extent of the recession during the latter part of 1937 will probably prove to have been at least as great as the recession in the latter part of 1929.

It, therefore, seems logical to assume that the percentage decrease in the amount of inflation from 1937 to 1938 will b about the same as that from 1929 to 1930. The decrease in that period amounted to 15.8 per cent. This indicates that the national income produced in the United States next year will drop to $59,000,000,000 from the estimated $70,000,000,000 produced in 1917.

This estimate of the national income in 1938 points to a decrease of about 23 per cent in the combined value of mine, factory and agricultural production from the 1937 level. This drop in value, however, will be partly accounted for by a lower price level.

It may consequenty be estimated that the volume of production will show a decrease of 15 per cent. Shipments of agricultural products next year will probably show little, if any, recession. The prospect is, therefore, that mining and manufacturing activity will be curtailed by more than 15 per cent.

The average decrease for these two lines may exceed 20 per cent with manufacturing showing greater curtailment than mining since the demand for petroleum should be fairly well maintained.

Your Family $2500 In Red

$2,184,000,000 Owed U. S. in Bay State

If Uncle Sam should suddenly present his tax bill to Massachusetts, the Bay State would have to produce two billion, 184 million dollars ($2,184,000,000).

And, not possessing that kind of money, if Massachusetts should call on all of its families for their pro rata share, it would mean $2500 for each of the 1,047,000 families in the state.

Of course, the federal government isn't going to ask Massachusetts for immediate payment of its six per cent share of the government's estimated current debt of $36,400,000,000—but those figures indicate what the debt means.

In addition, according to figures compiled by the state department of taxation, the state, county and municipal debts in the commonwealth amount to about $386,000,000. Of this, the state's 355 cities and towns owe $293,581,864.

Exclusive of Suffolk county, the combined county debt is $5,720,000. Suffolk's debt is $511,197.

STOMACH AND LIVER TROUBLE

Miss Threa M. Deering, 232 W. 3rd St., So. Boston, Mass says: I had suffered from liver and stomach trouble for quite a while. I had pain in my stomach after eating. Headaches and spells of vomiting would become dizzy at times and was constipated. I had been treated by local physicians but I did not improve under this treatment. I spoke to a friend who told me Dr. Walsh helped her and that Dr. Walsh would help me. I had Dr. Walsh treat me and I feel fine now. I make this statement in the hope that others who suffer as I did may profit by my experience and go to Dr. Walsh for a cure. Signed Miss Threa M. Deering.

+ Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answer every man.—Colossians IV., 6. +

The text for today is suggested by the Rev. Whitney Hale, Church of the Advent, Brimmer street, Boston. The next text will be suggested by the Rev. Phillips Endicott Osgood, Boston.

The Editor Says:

SENATOR WALSH'S remarks concerning the recent do-nothing session of Congress interest most people, jobless people especially.

The Senator expresses the belief that excessive taxation—particularly the Undistributed Profits Tax—unsound "reforms" and the constantly mounting national debt are the principal causes of the current "recession".

"In my opinion," he declares, "what is most needed is an assurance of confidence, and that can only come from the Federal Government.

"The Federal Government should give assurance that it does not intend to enter into competition with private industry.

"It should give assurance that its reform activities are to cease or at least that its program of needed reforms should be declared and made known."

With that opinion most people are in agreement. Common sense tells us that business cannot be frightened or reformed to death without the people's jobs and wages also going into the grave.

As the Senator so well says, it is high time for the men whom the people elect and send to the United States Congress to come down to earth and enact legislation that will make it possible for business and industry to expand normally and provide work for the millions who now eke out a bare existence on charity or relief projects.

ANOTHER PROTEST

—is made by members of a religious sect, known as Jehovah's Witnesses. This time the plea is addressed to the Sudbury School Committee. And, as usual, it condemns the Massachusetts law requiring school children to salute the United States flag.

The sect's spokesmen claim that they can render obeisance only to God and that they cannot conscientiously pay allegiance to the national emblem.

To most people this argument is not convincing. Honoring the country which protects us in peace and war and worshiping the Deity are vastly different things. We honor a parent who guards and guides us throughout childhood, but we never think that such a show of respect conflicts in any way with the homage we owe to our Creator.

Obviously, honoring a parent and honoring the country are very similar displays of affection.

The American flag protects all religions, creeds and sects, Jehovah's Witnesses included. The gratitude that members of all churches ought to feel and express is one of the most powerful reasons for keeping our Flag Salute Law on the statute books.

CARRYING BIG SUMS

—of money and currency on one's person is a dangerous and often a costly practice. Nobody knows that better than the Newark, N. J., man, whose $87,000 bankroll vanished after it slipped from his sweater.

A like misfortune was spared the Worcester man, whom police found sleeping by the roadside with $1650 in his pocket. A wise officer induced him to put the money where it belonged—in a bank.

The fear of banks that some misinformed persons harbor is hard to understand. Actually there is nothing to worry about. With their deposits insured, all banks are now as safe as the Newark man's sweater was unsafe. Money intrusted to them will not vanish. That's certain.

If everybody would realize this, there would be fewer robberies, fewer losses and fewer tears.

COMMISSIONER TIMILTY

—wins the approval of all friends of good government by his decision to take personal charge of the January police listing of Boston voters. His purpose is to prevent a repetition of the frauds which he exposed prior to the recent mayoralty election.

Mr. Timilty also shows good judgment in using only picked men and requiring Superintendent Fallon's sanction for all those assigned to the census taking.

Certainly patrolmen who in the past reported that abandoned houses were filled with "voters" and designated open fields as "residences" have no place in an honest tabulation of persons eligible to cast ballots.

In fact, there is a serious question whether such men have any right to continue as members of the Police Department.

"ON THE JOB"

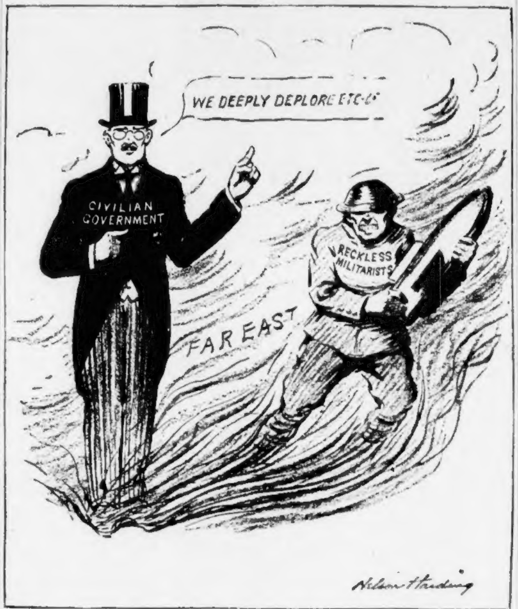
—is the appropriate title of a booklet mailed to us today by the Boston Chamber of Commerce. It sets forth all the organization's accomplishments during the present year and clearly outlines what it intends to do in 1938.

Such frankness is commendable, and we congratulate President Eliot Wadsworth and Secretary M. D. Liming for instituting it.

It is too bad that similar frankness could not be the policy in Washington, where no one seems to know what is going to be the Administration's next move.

Can Dr. Jekyll Control Mr. Hyde?

By Nelson Harding



London dispatches say that the British Government has made sixteen protests to the Japanese Government against violent acts by the Japanese militarists in China.

This country's protest against the bombing of the Panay is an unfinished episode in current history.

The civilian government of Japan "deplores" and "apologizes" for these reckless acts by its own armed forces. All this is very strange.

As Isaac Don Levine, noted writer, declared, last week, the Imperial Government at Tokyo plays "the dual role of a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, impersonated by its militarist and diplomatic wings."

The civilized world awaits the answer to the question—Can the Japanese Dr. Jekyll control its Mr. Hyde?

New York Day by Day -:-

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.

NOT many writing groups get along so swimmingly as the dramatic critics. Intimacy in their case does not inspire the axiomatic contempt. During the season they are thrown in close proximity many nights, not only in the theater but for palaver between acts.

They disagree often over verdicts in print, but the only notable explosion among them was when the feud between Alexander Woollcott and George Jean Nathan geysered into Nathan's phillipic in the old Smart Set, entitled "The Seidletz Powder of Times Square."

The critics have many unwritten laws in their credo to which they rigidly adhere. For instance they, as a courtesy to the management, take their seats at least five minutes before curtain time. It's also a custom not to applaud, no matter their enthusiasm.

And never, never are they supposed to laugh. But Robert Benchley frequently cracks that one with a guffaw that shakes the rafters. The critics do not always wear evening clothes—save on auspicious occasions such as a Katharine Cornell or . Lunt and Fontanne opening.

Critic John Anderson usually attends a premiere with his wife, an accomplished art critic. Richard Watts squires his mother, festooned with a spray of orchids. Nathan varies his companions, but mostly she is Lillian Gish, looking extremely gishish and aloof. Brooks Atkinson, of the Times, and John Mason Brown, of the Post, also escort their wives. The morning paper critics dart out about 15 minutes before the last curtain to beat the deadline, but the afternoon critics stay until the end—if they can bear it.

George Jean Nathan is the most obviously contemptible of shoddy showmanship of the guild. If the first act doesn't show promise, his two aisle seats are vacant the rest of the play. Consequently he has walked out on some turkeys this season. The Rialto has hung up the shortest runs on record. Tallulah Bankhead's four-day headache, for instance. Two closed after the first night and any number did not last out their week. Nearly all legitimate offerings these days put up the closing notice with the opening, to take advantage of the Equity ruling regarding salaries for a week after suspension.

Some of the editors are thinking of resorting to blasting to get Frank Sullivan, the humorist, out of Saratoga Springs. He went to his home town early this spring for a week or so rest and has remained on and on, finally closing his New York apartment. Incidentally, the records show that more than 60 per cent of the established writers living in New York 10 years ago have moved elsewhere.

I have been told that one of the sport writers on a tabloid was yanked before his chief the other day for starting off an article with "Irregardless." And even the meticulous Lucius Beebe spoke of something as "misfortunate." Brisbane on several occasions used prepositions instead of pronouns. One of my friendly but severe critics is a linotyper on—as one might expect—a Boston paper. He takes me to task when my English tatters around the edge.

Recently he put me in the corner with a dunce cap for saying: "He came (at) about 3 o'clock." Naturally it is one or the other. And he reddened my outstanding ears with the truthful charge that I often preceded my past participles with "too" instead of "too much." Viz: "He was too (much) exhausted to speak."

So, feeling guiltily no account, I pirooted through a highbrow magazine article and found among other things: "The river on whose banks"—instead of the correct "on the banks of which." Also this: "Harvard's history." Instead of the "history of Harvard." In fact, there were so many derelictions, even to the untutored eye, that I felt better.

The Marry-Go-Round -:-

By Helen Rowland

These long-distance engagements seldom get as far as the altar; because, while absence may make a girl's heart grow fonder, it is more apt to make a man's head grow cooler and his pulse grow steadier.

If a man's Christmas gift was something he actually wanted, it was probably the result of lots of thought and inspiration—on the part of his secretary.

One advantage of a radio over a husband is that while it insists on broadcasting a lot of "good advice," you don't have to listen to it.

Most bachelors go through life in the serene belief that their single-blessedness is due to good management instead of to good luck.

If 700 wives could not keep Solomon in the house when he heard that the Queen of Sheba (the glamour-girl of her day) was at the gate, what can one lone wife do in a world of glamour-girls?

Economic equality may give a girl the right to propose marriage; but the men are going to fight hard to defend their "divine right" to life, liberty and the pursuit of women.

When two's company, three's a crowd—but when two's monotony, three's a godsend!

Human Side of the News -:-

By Edwin C. Hill

NO ape of the Pleistocene age ever dreamed of a chromium Diesel train, an aeroplane or a Van Gogh. Nor did Mme. Sianthropus, the "anthropological Eve," of China, whose fossilized skull, arriving in New York, commands more newspaper space than would the arrival of any living person, barring a few kings and dictators.

In the scriptural phrase, "It doth not yet appear what we shall be," and there is increasing uncertainty as to what we have been. The look-out on the bridge looks with dim and shrouded vision into the fog, as does the man on the after-watch, and errant winds "fill our sails of destiny."

The Peking woman is believed to belong to the oldest human species, older even than the Pithecanthropus erectus, found in Java in 1891. Judging from the controversies which have attended such discoveries in the past, this comparative antiquity will be disputed, and probably even her humanoid character.

The currents of the news cross and interweave strangely in these modern days. It is possible that Mme. Sianthropus would not be making her distinguished entry into New York had it not been for the late Ivar Kreuger, the Swedish match king, whose suicide in Paris rocked the world.

I have not seen this noted in current news of the Peking woman, but newspaper readers with good memories will recall that Mr. Krueger was strangely interested in dragon's teeth—sowing many of them, incidentally—and in 1921 he financed explorations in China where "dragon's teeth," possibly human, had been found eighteen years before.

His geologists found nothing important at the time, but several years later some teeth were found. Krueger's scientists gave up, but Davidson Black, professor of anatomy at the Peking Union Medical College, kept on digging. From these excavations there was pieced together the Peking man, and now the Peking woman.

It was early in the nineteenth century that Georges Cuvier, the French paleontologist, first began to suggest that the history of man might be pieced out from his fossil remains. It has been only in the last few decades that the various discoveries in deep caves, or in the under-rock debris of ages, has spurred the inquiry into a stimulating and hopeful scientific quest.

The most authoritative scientists say they are still putting together the parts of the jigsaw puzzle. There is no assurance, there are vast gaps in their knowledge, and the quest for the "missing link" has been abandoned. And there is in all this a reminder of man's incessant concentration on his future, on immortal life, and his long indifference and ignorance as to his past. It is only yesterday that he became at all curious about his origin.

Neither is there any agreement about where the "Garden of Eden" might have been. It has been placed in the valley of the Euphrates, near Turkestan, in Afghanistan, North Africa, Persia and several other places. Henry Fairfield Osborn thinks that perhaps there was no Garden of Eden. He inclines to the view that man might have evolved in many places, the complete process of evolution working out under similar conditions.

Whatever specific forecasts of man's future are being made are those of the anthropologists, who, tracing the past, hope to read the future. Dr. Ernest Hooton of Harvard, author of the newly published book, "Apes, Men and Morons," sees survival fitness waning, and possible defeat for the human species.

Dr. Hrdlicka also sees a possibility of a long physical recession, but with possibly greater brain effectiveness to offset it. On the whole he is not so gloomy as Dr. Hooton, but still somewhat dubious.

March of Events -:-

By Benjamin DeCasseres

MR. ALBA SATTERTHWAITE of Huntington, L. I., a reader of "MARCH OF EVENTS," asks me the following curious—and fascinating—question:

"Do you believe that the ball of fire hurled out of the sun and which afterward became our Earth really had life in it?"

This is the famed "nebular hypothesis." It is, however, ONLY an hypothesis. But as a guess as to the origin of the planets it is the most believable yet advanced.

That ball of fire that is now the earth we live on had something more mysterious and amazing than life in it—it had hidden possibilities of life. In its fiery atoms and electrons were the patterns of Shakespeare, Beethoven—and Mr. Satterthwaite and myself.

If we were not in that fiery mass, where were we? No matter what forms our indestructible life-force takes, we have always got to be somewhere. For to be nowhere is not only not conceivable but it is talking nonsense.

Miss Maude Adams, now 65, gave a performance of Rostand's "Chanteeler" at Columbia, Mo., the other day.

The hold that Miss Adams has on the imagination of many of those youngsters out there to whom her Broadway triumphs are but a name was shown when a capacity crowd cheered her again and again after her performance.

The satire in "Chanteeler" has a direct application to many things going on today in this screamingly egotistic world of ours.

Chanteeler, King of the Barnyard, believes that it is his cock-a-doodle-doo each morning that causes the sun to rise.

He eloped with a pheasant, who, jealous of the dawn, covered Chanteeler's eyes with her wings one morning—and lo! he discovered that the dawn had come up without his cock-a-doodle-doo.

There are a lot of Chanteclers in Washington who believe their cock-a-doodle-doos keep the country going. As a matter of fact, their cock-a-doodle-doos cause more storm-clouds than dawns.

The recent death of Madame De Thebes in Paris removed the last of the great Sibyls. It is said that she foretold, among many other events, the death of General Boulanger (who committed suicide on his sweetheart's grave), most of the events of the World War, and the death of the celebrated poet, Catulle Mendes (who was killed in a railway tunnel).

The most famous of all clairvoyants was "Mother" Shipton, an Englishwoman who lived from 1488 to 1561.

She wrote:

"Carriages without horses shall go
"And accidents fill the world with woe.
"Around the world thoughts shall fly
"In the twinkling of an eye.
"In the air men shall be seen
"In white, in black and in green."

She predicted the events in the lives of all the personages famous at the court of Henry the Eighth.

If the law of cause and effect is never broken, then what will happen in the future is as surely fixed as is the past. Some gifted persons are born with the ability to see in images these necessary happenings. They are "clairvoyant"—or clear see-ers.

The existence of this power has been proven to me absolutely, and I'm "from Missouri."

The Political Parade -:-

By George Rothwell Brown

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.

SENATOR WHEELER'S proposal for a "Congressional Watchdog of the Treasury," to try to do something to cut outrageous government expense, has been the dream of every chairman of appropriations, in the House of Representatives, since Martin B. Madden held down that job.

But all of Madden's successors have taken it out in dreaming. The man from Chicago is the last with power and pep enough to walk in on the President of the United States and tell him "No!"

Wheeler's idea is for a joint congressional commission, made up of members from both Senate and House. Henry Clay evolved such a plan for putting through the Missouri Compromise.

Many efforts have been made in both major parties to create a workable joint steering committee, but while the committees have been organized, unhappily they wouldn't work.

This watchdog job really belongs to the chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations, but for five years the pressure of the spenders has been too much for them. One chairman died under the strain.

Senator Wheeler's suggestion of a joint commission to keep Congress informed, and to check all expenditures, is important, not because such a commission will be established, for probably it will not be, but because it reflects the increasing apprehension in Congress over the nation's financial condition.

It is more serious than the country generally appreciates. Many of the more thoughtful students of government treasury balances—and deficits—are privately of the opinion that the national debt today is not something over $37,000,000,000, but that it is actually in excess of $45,000,000,000. Treasury bookkeeping is held responsible for the difference.

When Chairman Jesse Jones of R. F. C. obtains from Congress the legislation he is seeking to wipe out $2,675,000,000 of "receivable assets," which he knows now will never be received, the national debt will jump to $40,000,000,000 on the treasury books.

When Louis XVI made Colonne comptroller-general, and placed him in charge of the finances, his policy was thus described by Necker:

> "Money was lavished, largesses were multiplied, there was no declining to be good-natured or complaisant, economy was made the object of ridicule, it was daringly asserted that immensity of expenditure, animating circulation, was the true principle of credit."

In a few months thereafter France was over the brink. From some such brink as that thoughtful men in Congress are seeking to draw back. But make no mistake, the spenders are still in the majority, and an aroused public opinion is a safer remedy than a joint commission.

Today at the Capitol we see money lavished, largesses multiplied, and economy become the subject of ridicule. It is discouraging to note how many in high places of responsibility still cling to the idea that immensity of expenditure is the true basis of credit.
